Farmers Can Weather Current Milk Price Crunch

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — There's no easy way around it: milk prices have hit a 22-year low, leaving many dairy farmers reeling with uncertainty about what the next year will bring.

Some farmers are angry and pointing the finger at whose to blame, while others are ready just to throw in the towel.

But wait, how did this happen when the market was doing so well? How did prices get this low, how long will they last, and what can farmers do to survive the price crunch?

According to Ken Bailey, associate professor of dairy markets and policy for the Pennsylvania State University, it is basically the law of supply and demand.

"In 1998 and 1999, there were a lot of incentives to expand, and the industry expanded too quickly," said Bailey.

"Milk production increased 12 percent in the West. The excess milk went into cheese, increasing cheese production by six percent. The market rolled along pretty well until people figured out that there was too much supply, then the market fell."

So why should the Northeast dairy producers suffer low prices when the West is responsible for the excess production? Milk is marketed nationally. And, while it has always been marketed nationally, it's just starting to hit really hard now.

"The foundation of our country was built on open borders between states," said Bailey. "But, now with more interstate highways and a new information age, it's even more of an open marketplace. Pennsylvania farmers have to compete with farmers in Idaho."

According to Bailey, soon Pennsylvania producers will be competing with farmers in New Zealand and Australia because the dairy industry is going to become a global marketplace.

Some farmers may be thinking that, even though it's an open marketplace, transportation prices should still come into play. Farmers in the East are much closer to the consumers, so they should get better prices. But the cost of transporting cheese from Idaho to Chicago is only three to five cents per hun-

Proper Manure Handling Key To Controlling Foodborne Illness

ANDY ANDREWS

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Producers shouldn't have to face public outbreaks of foodborne illness to make changes to their operations to prevent the problem, according to a vegetable specialist from Cornell University.

Controlling foodborne illness can be as simple as cultural practices to control plant disease, according to Dr. Anusuya Rangarajan, Cornell vegetable specialist.

Rangarajan spoke Monday afternoon to about 200 vegetable and fruit growers and industry representatives at the annual New Holland Vegetable Day at Yoder's Restaurant.

In a 1998 survey, consumers noted that foodborne pathogens concerned them more than alleged pesticide contamination in food, according to Rangarajan.

Rangarajan, who serves growers who manage fields ranging from one acre to 5,000 acres, spoke about the backlash in her own industry because of fears of food contamination.

About a year ago, in New York state, cabbage processors refused to accept cabbage grown on any ground preceded by a manure application. Manure from any living source — human, livestock, or poultry — can be rife with deadly bacteria that can cause foodborne illness.

Producers are often in a quan-

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Thirty-six years ago the Home and Farm Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, was erected to serve Lancaster County's agriculture and agribusiness concerns.

Today the center is a hub for city and county activities housing major offices for the extension, USDA, Soil Conservation Service, and other agricultural-related organizations. It also serves as a meeting place for many civic, political, and commercial organizations.

"I'm glad people had the foresight and vision 37 years ago to

National Egg Market
ATLANTA, GA
JANUARY 19, 2000

NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE

In Chicago, prices were lower. In the Eastern region, prices were unchanged to lower. Elsewhere, prices were unchanged. The market tone ranged barely steady to mostly weak. Retail demand was generally light to no better than moderate, and was best for the occasional retail feature. Supplies were at least adequate to ample, however, mediums were usually in the better position. Breaking stock supplies were adequate from regular sources, and demand for additional product was often limited as dealers watched market developments. Light type hens were fully sufficient for immediate slaughter requirements.

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA.
JANUARY 20, 2000

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was being affected by harsh winter weather conditions and forcasts of heavy snow in both production and shipping channels. Live supplies were at least moderate; weights were desirable to heavy. Processing schedules were just moderate at best and most plants have planned to close early to avoid the hazardous conditions expected thoughout the area. Some plants plan to operate on Saturday. Less than truckiot asking prices were unchanged at 44 to 56 cents. Trade sentiment was mostly steady. Bone-in and boneless skinless breasts were light, leg cuts were adequate, and wings were ample.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Jan 19, 2000

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat and corn bids finished slightly higher, supported by weather and lack of farmer selling. Soybean bids fell moderately lower as traders corrected recent sharp upturns. Wheat 2 to 4 cents higher. Corn steady to 1 cent higher. Sorghum 1 cent higher. Soybeans 1 to 6 cents lower. Rains are forecast in soft red winter wheat areas over the next few days, however, not much accumulation is expected in the Plains region. Export sales were absent again today. Argentine sources cut their crop estimate to around 14.1 million metric tons. Corn bids were slightly higher on good overnight export sales to Japan and Taiwan. Chinese competition has limited US gains in corn bids. So. Korea is reported to have bought another 6 million bushels overnight from China. Soybean bid fell moderately lower after five consecutive days of higher trends. Traders thought the market was oversold and made corrections. Soybean meal and oil prices were lower which put pressure on crush margins. Export demand continues slow this week. Brazil continues to receive some rain but many areas remain dry.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JANUARY 24-30, 2000

ST. THOMAS AQUINAS, JANUARY 28.

TOPS IN THEIR MILLENNIUM

Responding to a question from The World Almanac (World Almanac Books, 1999), Pulitzer prize-winning historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. named his choices for the ten most-influential people in the second millennium. Do you recognize all ten? Listed in order of importance, they are. William Shakespeare, Isaac Newton, Charles Darwin, Nicholaus Copernicus, Galileo Galilei, Albert Einstein, Christopher Columbus, Abraham Lincoln, Johann Gutenberg, and William Harvey. Gutenberg (c. 1397-1468) was a German printer, the first to use movable type cast in molds, and Harvey (1578-1657) is considered by some to be the founder of modern medicine for his discoveries about the heart.

The Building you want.
The Lease you need.

Telmark has been leasing equipment for over 35 years. Did you know that we've been leasing new buildings for that long too? Consider:

- Tax deductibility and accelerated deductions: Lease payments are income tax deductible over the term of the lease compared to 20-year depreciation of farm buildings and 39-year depreciation of commercial buildings. Could reduce tax liability this year.
- Low upfront costs: Beginning costs as little as one monthly lease payment.
- Flexible lease term: Building lease terms start aggressively at five years but may be as long as ten, twelve, or fifteen years.
- Customized payment schedules: Lease payment schedules are specially designed to match your cash flow.

First: Talk with a qualified builder to determine your needs and building cost.
Then: Call your Telmark representative for your financing.

Noisy Farms

Farms are noisy places. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering at Penn State says these noises range between 90 and 140 decibels, which is well above the 85-decibel limit at which industrial employers must provide hearing protection for workers.

"Consistent, repetitive exposure to high-decibel noise can damage hearing before you notice any change," Murpy says. "The farmer may think he's getting used to the noise, but in reality he already may have experienced a mild hearing loss."

Farmers may think that extremely high noise levels are normal. But if you must shout to be heard at a distance of about three feet, the noise is too loud and you should either reduce the noise level or wear hearing protection. You may think wearing earplugs or protective muffs like those worn at shooting ranges is inconvenient, unwieldy, or time-consuming. But to protect your hearing is to save you a lot of grief later in life.

Now is the time to get ready for spring work with noisy machinery. Obtain some protection for your ears.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Remember Dr. Donald Evans

Last Friday agriculture lost a great friend. Dr. Donald Evans, associate professor of Agricultural and Extension Education at Penn State, passed away at his home. Dr. Evans was an outstanding educator, agriculturist, administrator and community leader. He touched many lives, always looking for ways to "make the best better". Always a doer, he constantly turned dreams into reality. Forever challenging and encouraging people, he provided leadership for 4-H, FFA, Ag in the Classroom, production agriculture, public and vocational education and cooperative extension. His efforts in international agriculture is legendary. His vision, leadership and personal commitment was a major driving force in the growth and development of the Polish agricultural system over the past decade. Don, we are going to miss your enthusiasm, leadership and your commitment to agriculture, community and people.

However, the seeds you have planted in your students, colleagues and friends will continue to grow and multiply. As a 4-H member, I was taught the final test of a leader was that he leaves behind in other the people the will and desire to carry on. Dr. Evans passes that test with flying colors. On behalf of the agricultural community, I say thank you for making this world a better place to live.

To Reduce Stress

Stress is an everyday reality for today's farmer. When you feel pressure mounting, try these tips from N.Y. FarmNet. Shift from worrying to problem solving. Make daily, yearly and long term business plans. List priorities, set realistic goals, make a schedule and do not procrastinate. Learn to say no to things that hinder these goals. Be flexible when the unexpected occurs. Use clear communication. Listening skills are just as important as language skills. Use negotiation during conflict. Balance work and play. Make weekly time to relax and laugh, and daily time for yourself. A tired mind leads to bad decisions and accidents. Take care of your body. Exercise. Eat healthy. Get adequate sleep. Thing positive thoughts. Find others who do the same, and try to minimize time with those who do not. Celebrate holidays and family events. Talk with others.

To Put First Things First

John Vogel, editor of Pennsylvania Farmer, stated we need to pause long enough to put life in perspective and to focus on what is most important for our happiness. True success is found in a satisfying life, not in money, power or achievement. The following is a list for you to consider as you set goals for this year. Eat in moderation.

Sleep well and long enough to recharge your body and your mind. Surround yourself with people you have faith in. Know when and how to slow down and relax. Really love your family and let it show. Know "when to hold and when to fold." Know that in the long run, good prevails over bad. Thrive in your vocation, even with its peaks and pits. Take time to savor the little things. Take time to marvel at truly huge things. Laugh a lot and live longer for it. Remember that the secret of getting more is giving more. Reserve a day a week to do absolutely nothing that resembles work.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

DEMONIZING THE OPPOSITION

January 23, 2000

Background Scripture:
Matthew 12:22-45

Devotional Reading:
Luke 12:1-14.

Halford E. Luccock, writing in The Interpreter's Bible, says joshingly that "With all reverence, a list of sayings of Jesus could be assembled under the starting headline, 'Things I Wish Jesus Had Never Said.'" He goes on to say, "That may sound blasphemous, but it is not. Such a list would include sayings that have been so continuously and badly distorted, so warped from their original meaning and context, that the mis-understanding of them has caused great distress and evil." His point of reference is Mark 3:29, in which Jesus says, "Whoever blasphemes against the Holy Spirit never has forgiveness, but is guilty of an eternal sin. . . ."

Matthew 12:22-45 is similar. Having just healed a deaf and blind demoniac, Jesus is under attack by some of the Pharisees. People in the crow are asking, "Can this be the Son of David?" and the Pharisees are quick to snap back: "It is only by Beelzebub, the prince of demons, that this man casts out demons" (12:24). When confronted by the awesome power of Jesus' miracles, his opponents turned to slandering him.

Beelzebul was an ancient Canaanite god, "Lord of the earth." But the biblical writers expressed their contempt for this Baal, calling him Baaz*elbub,* meaning "Lord of the flies." They regarded him, not as a god, but as the prince of demons. Later on in this passage (v. 26), Jesus identifies Beelzebub with Satan.

A Civil War?

Jesus responds to this charge with an argument that reveals the irrationality of their words. If Jesus is casting out Satan, then it is a defeat for Satan. And, if it is a defeat for Satan, how could Satan be giving him the power to do so? "If Satan casts out Satan, he is divided against himself; how then shall his kingdom stand?" (12:26) Jesus depicts a civil war and, indeed, it was this depiction, "a house divided against itself," that Abraham Lincoln used so effectively in his pre-civil war debates with Senator Stephen Douglas.

Then, Jesus goes on to make that statement that Halford Luccock says he wishes Jesus had not made: "Therefore I tell you, every sin and blasphemy will be forgiven men, but the blasphemy against the Spirit will not be forgiven" (12:31). It does take one's breath away to hear Jesus say that sin and blasphemy against the Spirit of God will not be forgiven. Are there one or more sins that God cannot forgive?

Willful Blindness

I am personally glad that Jesus said this, particularly that he said it so pointedly, because it stands before us as a dire warning against a practice which is all too common: demonizing our opponents. What this means is that we attribute all that they do to their alliance with Satan. I remember all too well the woman who told my mother than she was going to Hell because she didn't embrace a particular religious practice. She was sincere in her belief, but she was endangering her own soul in making this attack.

The problem with demonizing persons you don't like or don't agree with is that you are permitting your feelings to hide the spark of God that is in each of these persons. This is arrogance on our part, imposing a limitation upon the grace of God, insisting that a work of mercy is a sign of Satan. As George Arthur Buttrick put it, "In obdurate pride men can call the light darkness, or Jesus' works of mercy the black magic of Baalzebub."

But why does Matthew have Jesus say that such blasphemy "will not be forgiven"? Perhaps it is not a matter of will not, but can not. It is not only blindness, it is also willful blindness. When, in our arrogant judgment we condemn others as being in league with Satan, we fail to see the God in them because we do not want to see Him. Buttrick says: "A man who deliberately tampers with the light God gives may rob himself of the power even to see pardon, let alone receive it."

When we demonize others, we give Satan his best shot at us.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University

January 14, 2000

Cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained relatively stable this week. Prices for 40-pound blocks were $1.10 per pound on Monday, January 10, rose to $1.1325 on Thursday, January 13, and fell to $1.1250 the next day. Barrel cheese prices remained steady this week at $1.1025 per pound.

USDA reports that cheese production remains seasonally heavy and that food service promotions are strong. Other than that, there hasn't been any new information for the markets to react to. Prices may move next week, however, when the milk production report (January 18) and the cold storage report (January 21) are released. The latter will reveal November and December butter and cheese stock numbers.

What was surprising this week was the strength in butter prices. Grade AA butter at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange rose from $0.89 per pound on Monday to $0.965 by Friday. According to USDA, "many butter producers and handlers are puzzled by the recent price firmness recorded at the CME." USDA further reported that churning activity is heavy, stocks of fresh butter are ample, and demand is just fair.

The markets for dry dairy products continues to languish. The government purchased 10.881 million pounds of nonfortified nonfat dry milk and 925,764 pounds of fortified nonfat dry milk from Western and Midwestern sources. USDA reports that some producers are selling powder at $1 per pound, below support price levels. In addition, prices for dry buttermilk are also depressed due to strong cheese production.

The good news is that demand for dairy products last year was strong. USDA reported in Dairy Market News that commercial disappearance of dairy products during the first 10 months of 1999 totaled 136.6 billion pounds, up 2 4 percent over the same period a year ago. I'm particularly interested in the level of cheese disappearance during the last quarter of 1999 We should know these numbers in a month or two.

My forecasts for the year are in Table 3 below. I started with a forecast of commodity prices. From there I projected component prices and class prices. If you have access to the internet, you can download this model from the following URL. http://www.aers.psu edu/dairyoutlook/excel.htm.

I compared my Class III price forecast with the Chicago Mercantile Exchange ,BFP milk futures (also a Class III price) as of January 14, 2000. There are similarities for the first six months of 2000. But I expect market prices to strengthen the last six months of the year.

For dairy producers, there is little incentive to hedge or forward contract milk at this time as the futures markets have a bleak outlook. At this time there is greater upside potential for these numbers. A better strategy would be to wait. If in the weeks aheadon futures prices rise above the $11 level for February through April contracts, one may want to hedge a small part of their milk supply (no more than 25 percent).

For more information on dairy outlook and federal order reform, see my web site at: http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/

Farmers Can Weather Current Milk Price Crunch

dredweight. Transportation costs are not as high as they were 20 years ago.

According to Bailey, production has to fall for prices to improve. "Farmers haven't been hit with the record low milk price yet," said Bailey. "December milk production is still up 3.8 percent across the nation."

Next week farmers will receive their milk check for December, which has the 22-year low milk price on it. In February, they'll get paid for January milk, which will bring an even lower price. Once the low milk prices hit, Bailey expects milk production to go down.

"Farmers need incentives to expand." said Bailey. "With the high cost of replacement heifers, interest rate increases, high labor costs, and low milk prices, there is no incentive."

Bailey expects the milk prices to come back up in June or July. "Once we get through May, which is typically the month when production peaks, it's going to improve," he said. "And there are things that farmers can do to get through the tough times."

Budget your income out for the year. Bailey's website includes a spreadsheet to help farmers budget their income and rearrange their expenses.

"If you can get a line of credit to get through the next six months, do it now," said Bailey. He expects that during the first few months of 2000, milk prices will be below break-even points.

"I know that many farmers don't have a lot of flexibility," said Bailey. "But you have to budget it out."

Farmers should think about what they can do to cut back on expenses. "You can't take away expenses that are going to affect milk production. But you may be able to delay loan payments, reschedule interest payments, or arrange for short-term financing."

Ask questions about your feed supply. Because of last year's drought, many dairy producers will have to buy forage and other feeds. Now may be a good time to lock in feed costs for the year.

Bailey suggests visiting your local feed mill to find out if you can forward contract some of your feed supply. "You want to look at your risks for the upcoming year, and feed costs are one of your biggest risks," said Bailey.

"Feed prices have been very low over the last couple of years. We don't know what they're going to do. The last thing you want is to see milk prices finally improving and then suffer from higher feed costs, too."

Joel Rotz, dairy specialist at the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, also suggests some other options.

While he doesn't see the milk price improving over the next few months, he does think that farmers can survive if they stick together.

"There's no doubt about it, the low milk prices are going to hurt farmers," said Rotz. "But they're the result of cheap feed and a couple of years of good milk prices."

For example, the Pennsylvania state average milk price in 1998 was $15.92 per hundredweight compared to prices in the $13 to $14 range during past years.

Rotz suggests the following options.

Look into contracted prices. "I know some milk cooperatives are offering contracted milk prices that take the sting off of lower prices," said Rotz. "However, farmers have to realize that contracting locks them into a price for the entire year. If the price improves at the end of the year, you still have to take the lower price."

Despite the risk, Rotz still thinks it is something farmers need to consider.

Ask your cooperative or dairy about over-order premiums. According to Rotz, the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board has mandated an over-order premium for Class I milk produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. The premium is about $1.24 per hundredweight.

"The premium will help some farmers a lot and others not so much," said Rotz. "It depends on the utilization of your milk."

Lower your cost of production. "When prices are this low, the farmers with the lowest cost of production are going to fair the best," said Rotz.

Many farmers have expanded to spread out the production costs over more cows. But, as Rotz said, "that creates the dilemma of excess production."

Rotz suggests smaller dairies lower production costs by reducing overhead costs, owning less machinery, cutting harvesting costs through grazing, and networking with neighboring farmers to share high cost equipment.

Stay focused. Both Bailey and Rotz agree that the best thing farmers can do to get through the low milk price period is to focus on their operation and limit their expenses.

"It's frustrating when farmers talk to their neighbors or hear about people on Wall Street who are making so much money," said Bailey. "But we got to realize that this is an open market, and we have to be prepared for the ups and downs."

Bailey cautions spending energy trying to change the current policy. "We spend the last five years making hard-earned changes to the policy," said Bailey. "Now we finally got the new system in place, and I don't see any significant changes happening for some time."

Rotz agrees. "The new system is actually putting more money into producers' pockets," said Rotz. "It allows for Class I milk prices to be based on the higher of either Class III or Class IV."

Rotz estimates that, on average, the new system adds about 55 cents per hundredweight to the farmer's blend price for milk.

Bailey also warns against blaming the processors, bottlers, and retailers for the low prices. "They're our partners," said Bailey. "Without them, farmers would really be in bad shape."

While Rotz still sees the Northeast Dairy Compact as an option for increasing premiums, he thinks it will be a tough battle to get the Compact passed in Congress for Pennsylvania. Rotz estimates that farmers in the New England states are getting $2.80 more per hundredweight because of the Compact.

Land O'Lakes Explains New Pricing System

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — Mention federal market order reform and the new milk pricing system, and many farmers are left scratching their heads. Yet the new system affects January milk.

That's why Land O'Lakes Cooperative is hosting 16 local meetings in the region over the next two weeks.

"We want to help producers understand what's going to happen in the next couple of months," said Dennis Schad, Land O'Lakes Manager of Regulatory Affairs.

One of the first meetings was held Tuesday at Sunnycrest Dining Hall in Morgantown. Twenty farmers attended the meeting, where Schad introduced the new milk pricing system and the federal market order changes.

The new federal milk markets took effect on January 1, 2000. The reform, mandated by Congress in the 1996 Farm Bill, consolidated 33 market orders into 11.

Due to the reform, Pennsylvania and surrounding areas will be a part of Order 1, which includes the Northeast region of the United States. Farmers in the old federal orders 1, 2, and 4 are now all included in Order 1.

"The original order system related to local class I markets," explained Schad. "But now milk travels much longer distances. The new orders reflect regional milk markets."

42 percent of the milk produced in Federal Order 1 goes toward Class I milk, which is processed as fluid milk. 30 percent goes to Class III, which is used to make cheese, while 18 percent goes for Class II or soft products, like yogurt or sour cream. And 10 percent is marketed as Class IV, which is used for butter and powder.

Under the new milk pricing system, the blend price for Federal Order 1 is a weighted average of all four classes. It is basically formulated by taking the Class I milk price multiplied by .42, the Class II price by .18, the Class III price by .3, and the Class IV price by .1, and then adding the four totals together.

According to Schad, the new system benefits the farmer because the Class I price is based on the higher of either Class III or Class IV.

"In January, the Class IV price was $1 higher than the Class III price, so bottlers paid a dollar more per hundredweight," said Schad. "That added about 40 cents to farmers' blend price."

The new system also establishes "multiple component pricing" in which the farmer's price is based on three different components found in the milk -- true protein, other solids, and butterfat. This "multiple component pricing" takes into account what the processors want most from the milk.

"Cheese makers want the protein from milk," said Schad. "So they'll pay more for it, while Class IV users want butterfat, protein, and solids."

The farmer's milk check will list pounds produced for each of the three components. That poundage will be multiplied by the unit price the processor is paying for that component, and then the three values will be added together to get the Class III price that farmer receives for his milk.

For example, if a hundredweight of milk tests for 3.1 percent protein, 5.6 percent other solids, and 3.5 percent butterfat and if processors are paying $2.12 per pound of protein, $.049 per pound of other solids, and $.86 per pound of butterfat, the Class III price for that farmer would be $9.8564 per hundredweight.

The Class III price is then converted to the blend price by accounting for the Class I, II, and IV milk price at the market. This conversion is called the Producer Price Differential, and it equals the pooled difference between Class III and the other classes.

This is where it gets tricky -- the Producer Price Differential is announced in Boston, Ms., but the Boston price only works for farmers who are shipping their milk into Boston. Most farmers around here don't send their milk to Boston, so their blend price also takes into account a Location Adjustment.

The location adjustment basically equates the Producer Price Differential to where the farmer's milk is delivered. For example, milk shipped into the Carlisle, Harrisburg, and Hershey area would have a location adjustment of -$0.45. That means that 45 cents would be deducted from the PPD price announced in Boston for farmers shipping their milk to Carlisle.

According to Schad, the handler or cooperative will have a choice of either showing the location adjustment on a farmer's milk check or automatically deducting it from the PPD price. Land O'Lakes will have a line item on the check with the location adjustment listed.

"The bottom line of the new pricing system will benefit farmers who are making what the processors want," said Schad.

"Farmers will now be paid the most for protein, which is used to make cheese." In the past, farmers producing high amounts of butterfat profited the most.

Order No. 4 Weighted Price $12.47 For December

ALEXANDRIA, Va.–The December 1999 weighted average milk price announced for the Middle Atlantic Marketing Area is $12.47 per hundredweight.

The weighted average differential price was $2.76 per hundredweight and the producer nonfat milk solids (NFMS) price was 73 cents per pound. The weighted average price was down $3.25 from November and was $4.88 lower than a year earlier. The producer NFMS price was down 67 cents from last December.

The nonfat milk solids price, applicable to handler payments, was $.7407 per pound for the month, down 66.92 cents from last year. The gross value of December producer milk, adjusted to 3.5 percent butterfat was $72.5 million, compared to $92.3 million a year ago.

Producer receipts totaled 586.9 million pounds during December, an increase of 51.7 million pounds from last December and the average daily delivery of 3,749 pounds per producer increased 155 pounds or 4.3 percent from a year earlier. A total of 5,050 producers supplied Order 4 handlers during the month, an increase of 246 from a year ago.

Class I producer milk totaled 253.0 million pounds and was up 19.7 million pounds, or 8.4 percent, from last December. Class I milk accounted for 43.11 percent of total producer receipts during the month, compared with 43 60 percent in December 1998.

The average NFMS test of producer milk was 8.73 percent, down from 8.76 percent the previous year. The average butterfat test of producer milk was 3.83 percent, up from 3.80 percent last December.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 199.6 million pounds during December, an increase of 3.6 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

Understand the information on your milk check. Bailey does recommend that farmers take more interest in understanding how their milk price is formulated. "Everyone producing milk in Pennsylvania has to understand how the milk price is determined," he said.

"When the price is announced by the market administrator, farmers should be able to look at their milk check and determine if it falls in line with the price that was announced. If it doesn't, they need to ask questions to their cooperative or dairy."

Bailey's web site includes a forecast of the milk prices for the next 12 months, along with an explanation of how the new milk pricing system works. "It's my job to take the milk prices that come out of Washington and explain what they mean," said Bailey.

Farmers who have access to the Internet should visit Bailey's website, www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook, to utilize the spreadsheets and information available on the site.

Bailey also hopes to provide dairy extension agents with the forecast numbers, spreadsheets, and benchmark tools from the web site so that the agents can share the information with farmers in their counties.

Extension To Conduct Soybean School

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension will be conducting a one-day soybean school for area farmers at the Lebanon County Agricultural Center Wednesday, Feb. 2.

Sign-in will begin at 8:30 a.m. and will conclude by 3:30 p.m., according to John Rowehl, regional agricultural agent for grain crops.

"This is intended for someone that is relatively new to soybean production and looking for the basic fundamentals. We are going to cover everything from plant growth to cultural practices and pest management of soybeans," said Rowehl, regional extension agent coordinating the school. "Participants will take an active part in some problem-solving exercises, so this will not just be a sit-and-listen meeting."

John Yocum and Elwood Hatley, Penn State extension specialists in soybean management, will assist in conducting the program.

There is a $25 fee for attending this school. This covers reference material and lunch.

The soybean school is also open to anyone working in the business of crop input supply and service. Call the Lebanon County Cooperative Extension office at (717) 270-4391 to register by Friday, Jan. 28 so that adequate arrangements can be made.

Proper Manure Handling Key To Controlling Foodborne Illness

dary. Manure must be recycled back into the earth for much-needed plant nutrients. To ensure, however, that vegetables and fruit do not become contaminated, according to the Cornell specialist, it's important to follow a "common-sense" approach to managing manure and reducing the risk.

The culprit is E. coli 0157, a bacterium that causes severe illness, especially risky to young children and people with compromised immune systems. Fruit and vegetable consumption has gone up 24 percent from 1970-1997. So as more fruits and vegetables are consumed, there is a disturbing upward trend in the amount of cases of foodborne illness reported, noted the Cornell specialist.

Increases in reported outbreaks can be attributed to the technologies and information distribution capabilities of the agencies charged with tracking foodborne contamination.

And foodborne illnesses are increasing globally — not just in the United States.

A rise in the number of salad bars in U.S. restaurants comprised 35.4 percent of the outbreaks from 1990-1998. Most of the outbreaks are associated with lettuce consumption, Rangarajan said, and sprouts.

To stem the problem of foodborne illness, producers can do their part to more carefully manage manure around the farm. "Learn about where the original risk comes from, develop a plan and think about what to do," she said.

Because scientists still know little about how the foodborne disease organisms survive in the environment, there are few alternatives. The organisms are "ubiquitous," active everywhere in the environment, she said. E.coli 0157 survives the acid conditions of the stomach and can lead to some "awful illnesses."

But the microbes behave much like other organisms in plant diseases.

"Anything you do to manage the manure to protect the environment," said Rangarajan, "will also protect the crop from microbial contamination."

Growers need to keep record of manure rates, time of application, methods of incorporating manure, and watch when they plant.

Also, beware of what's going on with the water. Surface water sources for irrigation can contaminate crops with harmful bacteria. The only source of water should be potable drinking water that is regularly tested for coliform bacteria.

All manure carries pathogens, so it is important to make sure the manure is incorporated into the soil and enough time goes by before planting a vegetable or fruit crop.

As vegetable growers, Rangarajan told those at the meeting to "be diligent about management of manure." No manure should come in direct contact with produce. Flies, she said, can move off cull piles to the clean produce. Cull piles should be eliminated.

Composting manure serves to kill much of the harmful bacteria. The heat from microbial breakdown kills the pathogens.

And it's important, the Cornell specialist noted, to always incorporate the manure. And never, never sidedress with manure.

About 120 days, at least, are required from when the manure is applied until the crop is harvested. That means manure must be applied in the fall, especially to early planted and harvested crops.

"Keep animals out of all (packing and processing) areas as best you can," she said. And choose a crop that is more upright to minimize the risk. Use crops that have no direct contact with the soil, including those with trellises or staking systems and plastic mulch with drip irrigation. Drip irrigation is safer because the E.coli pathogens can be carried in water. Keeping the leaves and fruit dry ensures good control.

If broadcast spraying or irrigating, it is important to use potable water if close to harvest, she noted.

At harvest, according to Rangarajan, growers should pick only dry fruit, leave any fruit with fly droppings on it, use clean totes, cool the product quickly, and train workers in the importance of handwashing on a regular basis.

Totes can be washed in water mixed with bleach at a rate of ½ teaspoon per five gallons or one pint per 100 gallons.

Keeping the produce cool helps stem bacteria growth. At 95 degrees, one bacteria can multiply to 20 million in 6.7 hours. At 40 degrees, the same bacterial growth rate takes 16.7 days.

When hand washing, specialists recommend at least 20 seconds rubbing with soap and water.

By following these procedures, growers can stem possible outbreaks. The product is safe and producers don't have to face the problems endured with recent outbreaks in several states.

Plant Disease

Powdery mildew, early blight, late blight — these kinds of problems can sprout up in cucurbit and other fields. Penn State has found some significant differences in varieties and types of control of these diseases in several trials.

Following management strategies to reduce harvest loss because of disease is crucial, according to Dr. Alan MacNab, Penn State Extension, at the New Holland Vegetable Day.

MacNab demonstrated how critical it is to watch for treatment resistance building up in plant species. And varieties vary in their resistance to fungi.

Many problems can be controlled simply by earlier planting. MacNab noted that on early plantings, 46 days passed before early blight showed up; 30 days in mid-season; and only 14 days to the appearance of early blight late in the season.

Growers should know that late blight can be "very, very devastating, it can move very, very fast, and can wipe out the whole crop," MacNab noted, sometimes within a two-week period.

To counter the blights, purchase disease-free tomato plants. "Destroy the potato cull pile," he said. Blight can overwinter and spread to local fields, and you can "get in trouble early."

And continue to rotate crops to stem disease.

Vegetable Growers Association

Bill Troxell, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA), spoke about the work of the association in helping to fund research, its work on promoting the industry, and about the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention.

The PVGA helped fund 14 different projects. It also helped fund many promotional efforts statewide, along with money from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Through the PDA, PVGA helped erect 23 billboards. The PDA erected 70 more billboards with the "Pennsylvania Produce: Simply Delicious" logo.

Press releases, detailing the work of the PVGA, reached 2.4 million readers.

AN EGG A DAY . . .

Carol V. Gay
Professor Of
Cell Biology
And Poultry Science

Why does it take 24 hours, or so, for a chicken to form an egg?

A short answer to this question is the complexity involved. Egg formation is a sequential, multi-step process.

The process begins when the ovary releases an egg yolk complete with a cluster of embryonic cells floating on its surface; technically this is called the ovum. In 15-30 minutes the funnel-shaped open end of the oviduct engulfs the yolk.

I saw a movie of this engulfment when I was a graduate student and still remember how amazing this was. How did the funnel know where the ovum was?

Once engulfed, the yolk begins its journey down the oviduct, a tube that is 16-18 inches long. Much of the oviduct is comprised of a region, called the magnum that manufactures and secretes proteins to form the egg white, mainly albumen and several other proteins. The oviduct wall is muscular and so can move the ovum along by a gentle squeezing, pulsating action that rolls the yolk in a slow progressive spiral. The result is that by the time the yolk passes through the magnum it has become coated with egg white and has taken on the characteristic egg shape. Transit time through the magnum, which is about 13 inches long, is 2-3 hours.

The next segment of the oviduct is called the isthmus; it is quite short, about 1 inch in length, but transit time is 1-2 hours. The isthmus also secretes proteins, but these proteins form a tough highly cross-linked membrane, known as the shell membrane, on the egg white surface. This membrane will serve as the foundation for eggshell formation.

Finally, the now well-defined egg enters the last region of the oviduct, the shell gland. The egg spends 20-26 hours in this final chamber. In the first few minutes, a dilute salt solution diffuses into the egg white, a process called plumping, causing the egg to swell to its full size. Then, the eggshell is formed as calcium carbonate crystals precipitate onto the shell membrane.

The finishing touches of egg formation include secretion of pigment and the water impervious cuticle. The egg is laid about a day after the yolk began its journey in the early morning hours of the previous day.

As mentioned, there are two time-consuming steps in the egg forming process: laying down the egg white and forming the calcified shell. Could these processes be forced to occur more rapidly to increase egg production? This is doubtful, because the structures that form both egg white and eggshell have to be replenished. Forming egg white protein requires delivery of the protein building blocks, the amino acids, to the tissue that then builds new protein by adding amino acids one by one to the growing ends of the protein molecules. Amassing a large volume of protein requires time.

Likewise, replenishing the source of eggshell calcium in the medullary bone is also time consuming. The laying hen wastes no time in replenishing these stores. While the shell is being formed, new albumen is synthesized and conversely, while albumen is formed, calcium stores are replenished.

Egg formation is a complex process and is tightly orchestrated by many kinds of neuro-endocrine controls.

Disturbances to the control mechanisms result in cessation of laying which can take many days to recover.

PA DHIA Herd Management Workshops, District Meetings

Dave Slusser
General Manager

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co).–DHIA has set the dates and locations of nine district herd management workshops and district membership meetings. All members, interested farmers, and industry representatives are invited. This interesting and educational workshop will include presentations by George Cudoc on "How Cows Talk to Us and What They Say," and a live demonstration of Barn Owl 2000 herd management software. During the workshop, members and guests will be provided a lunch, and following the workshop, members will conduct the district membership meeting.

PA DHIA provides a very valuable service that will positively impact your bottom line. Our herd management reports, and our Barn Owl 2000 software provide excellent analytical tools for you, your herd consultant, nutritionist, and veterinarian. You will improve your production efficiency if you and your advisors use the DHIA information. Come and bring your advisors to learn how to better use this valuable information. The program and meal are free. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

During the brief membership meeting, members will elect their directors to the board where terms have expired and will discuss a proposal by the board planning committee to nominate and elect directors by mail ballot. The board feels that the membership will be better represented by the mail ballot system, however, that will require a by-law change. The board hopes to get ideas from the members at these workshops and meetings.

Listed below are the dates and locations. Please mark your calendar and attend. Notices of these workshops and membership meetings will be in your herd report envelopes and in PA DHIA ads. All meetings begin at 10:00 a.m. Elections will be held in Districts 3, 6 & 9.

Tobacco Prices Still Poor

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Tobacco sales continued Monday and Thursday this week at the Pennsylvania Tobacco Marketing Association Auction.

Sale prices were "poor," said Dennis Hess, auction manager.

Hess noted that Thursday was the better of the two days in numbers of pounds sold and average prices. Good tobacco ranged from an average of 50-60 cents a pound.

"Monday was a very poor day in here," said Hess. On Monday only two buyers were at the sale at the Orlon Industrial Park. Thursday's auction had four buyers.

On Monday, at the start of the auction, there were 237,299 pounds of old and new tobacco on the floor. The auction sold 72,375 pounds.

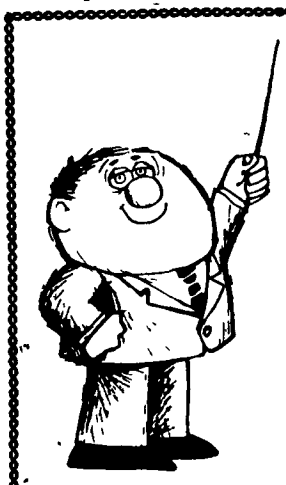
On Monday, the old Pa. 41 tobacco averaged 27 cents a pound and new was 25 cents a pound. The old Maryland 609 tobacco averaged 23 cents a pound and the new averaged 38 cents a pound. On Monday, only about 10 skids brought a bid of 60 cents a pound and more. Most tobacco sold in the 25-35 cent per pound range.

On Thursday this week, there were 189,391 pounds of tobacco on the floor at the start of the auction. The auction sold 142,931 pounds. The old Pa. 41 tobacco averaged 36 cents a pound. No new Pa. 41 tobacco was sold.

The old Maryland 609 tobacco averaged 47 cents a pound. The new 609 averaged 49 cents a pound, according to Hess.

The same day, 30-40 skids brought more than 60 cents a pound, but most prices were in the 40-50 cents per pound range. Hess said prices remain "very poor," but most growers sold the tobacco on the floor by Thursday, except for a few that hauled it away.

The auction plans to conduct sales on Monday and Thursday next week, Hess said.



A LESSON WELL LEARNED...

Glickman Fills Vacancy On National Dairy Board

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced the appointment of Kent Herman, Taylorsville, N.C., to fill a vacancy in region 10 on the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board. Region 10 includes Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia.

Herman will serve the remainder of a 3-year term ending Oct. 31, 2001. The vacancy was created by the resignation of Charles Deputy, Harrisonburg, Va.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers representing 13 regions of the contiguous United States, administers a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education.

The board was established by the Dairy Production Stabilization Act of 1983. It is authorized to design programs to strengthen the dairy industry's position in domestic and foreign markets. The national program is financed by a mandatory 15-cent per hundredweight assessment on milk produced in the contiguous 48 states and marketed commercially by dairy farmers. USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service monitors the operation of the Board.

AMS encourages all eligible individuals to participate in its committee and board activities. It is USDA's policy that membership on industry-governed boards and committees accurately reflect the diversity of individuals served by the programs.

Dear PFGC Supporter

In 1960, a group of individuals, who recognized the importance of forages to the dairy and Livestock industry, organized the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) For the past 40 years, our theme has been "Industry Farmer Scientist-Working Toward Sounder Grassland Program"

Now, as the forage industry is at the crossroads of centuries, we are preparing to celebrate our 40th anniversary in 2000 and plan for the future The Council needs the support of those of us who earn a living from this important industry Therefore, we are asking for your help in continuing our successful eductional organization and in recognizing the people who had the vision to support the forage industry initially and throughout the past 40 years

First, please join or renew your membership in PFGC as a supporting organization for 2000 (A supporting organization invoice has been ecnlosed ) Your support will allow the Council to proceed with its educational and research programs as they relate to forages for dairy and livestock producers

Second, please assist us in recognizing and celebrating PFGC's accomplishments by participating in our 40th Anniversary activities An anniversary celebration has been scheduled for Wednesday, August 16, 2000, beginning at 4 00 p m at the "covered bridge" on the Wayne Harpster's Evergreen Farms, located near the Ag Progress Days site We welcome your attendance and your support to help cover the costs of tent rental, sound sytem, lighting, catered meal, etc As an event contributor, you will be introduced at the event and recognized in our event program and you will receive a copy of the 40-Year History of PFGC

In addition, will recieve a copy of and recognition in the new PFGC Membership Resource Book This resource features all of the Penn State Agronomy Fact Sheets, other valuable forage aids and copies of industry-submitted product/service data sheets (see enclosed sheet) Please note that you do not need to provide data sheets to be recognized in the book A 40th Anniversary invoice is enclosed for your use

We are expecting over 350 members and key forage producers to attend our anniversary celebration Several forage leaders will present the history of PFGC "by decade" as the 40-Year History of PFGC, a book written by Dr John E Baylor and Richard C Hann, is released that day The President of the American Forage and Grassland Council, other keynote speakers and PFGC Past-Presidents will also be there

Thanks again for your supporting membership, participation and support of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and its activities

Maryland Workshop

COLLEGE PARK, Md.–If France alone has more than 200 varieties of cheese, how many other kinds of milk products exist that are not commonly found in supermarkets?

Answers to that question illustrate the potential for niche markets that possibly could be utilized by Eastern dairy farmers doing on-farm processing, said Scott A. Rankin, Cooperative Extension dairy and food products processing specialist at the University of Maryland.

Dr. Rankin heads a planning committee for the first workshop of its kind in Maryland–"On-Farm Milk Processing: Alternative Income Opportunities for Milk Producers." The all-day event is scheduled in Frederick, Md., on Saturday, April 1, tentatively at the new Dutch's Daughter restaurant on Himes Avenue in southwest Frederick. A $20 registration fee includes lunch and printed materials.

Subject areas will include processing of cheeses and other specialty milk products from cow, sheep, and goat milk. There will be opportunity for networking sessions with representatives of successful on-farm milk processing operations.

Complete details and registration forms are contained in brochures that will be available in February at Cooperative Extension county offices throughout Maryland. Or call (301) 405-4568.

Christian Farmers To Meet In Maryland

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

WESTMINISTER, Md. - The Fellowship of Christian Farmers thirteenth annual outreach luncheon is scheduled to be held on March 4, 2000, at Wilhelm LTD along Route 140. Starting time is 12 noon with seating to begin at 11:30 a.m.

The special speaker this year is Bobby Griffin, a businessman from Bristol, Virginia. He will share how he was considered "least likely to succeed" when he dropped out of school in ninth grade to join the army. The Lord took hold of his life and changed everything. His very real experiences of life on his uncle's farm and how God made a difference in his future are all parts of a message you will not want to miss.

Special music will be provided by Kelly Bjorkland who grew Carroll County, and now lives with her husband and four children in Shippensburg, Pennsylvania. Along with dinner by Larry Wilhelm, testimonies, fellowship, and a wonderful message of the gospel will be part of the event.

To purchase tickets for the buffet luncheon at $8.00 ea., or for more information, call Wilson Lippy at (410 374-2975.

Historical Barn Talk Canceled

A popular program entitled "The History of the Pennsylvania Barn" which was to have taken place on Saturday, January 30 has been canceled. The cancellation has had to be made because the presenter Robert Ensminger has had to undergo emergency surgery.

The program is sponsored each year by the Lancaster County Departments of Parks and Recreation. "I know that there are a lot of people who look forward to this program so we want to get the word out," John Gerencser, recreation coordinator said. "However, our thoughts are with Ensminger and we wish for him a speedy recovery."

For information on when this program will be rescheduled, contact the park office at (717) 299-8215.

LOBB BUFFALO FARM Carl Lobb started his buffalo herd in 1992. His nine original breeding stock calves were purchased from Trexler Game Preserve located in Lehigh County, Pennsylvania.

Carl's herd is raised on the outskirts of Kutztown (Berks County, Pennsylvania) and has increased over the last 7 years to 27 head of buffalo. He markets breeding stock and a few animals for slaughter. Buffalo handling seems to be Carl's biggest challenge.

Carl farms 100 acres, of which 62 acres are tillable. Corn, Wheat, and Hay are the farm's main crops. Carl, a Young Farmer Member, is very anxious to tell you more about his experiences and knowledge of raising buffalo.

Holstein Association Announces Convention

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The 2000 Pennsylvania Holstein Convention is set for February 17-18 at the Clarion Hotel in Carlisle.

The Convention includes a tour to the state capitol, panel discussions on "Milk Marketing" and "Welcome to the Internet," the convention banquet, awards breakfast and program, Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association silent auction, annual meeting, ladies program, and the annual convention sale.

On Thursday, the host counties invite participants to attend host day activities. The two panel discussions scheduled for Thursday afternoon include Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy marketing specialist, and Dr. Mark Varner from the University of Maryland, animal and avian sciences.

At 2 p.m., Bailey will update workshop participants on milk marketing. He will explain the pricing systems, reasons for the current prices, and what dairy producers can do in reference to milk marketing.

Starting at 3:30 p.m., Dr. Varner will discuss how to use the Internet to maximize your dairy business. He will also present information on web page design and farm computer use.

The annual awards breakfast will recognize this year's All-Pennsylvania Progressive Breeder and Progressive Genetic Herd Award winners. Special recognition will also be given to people who have played a significant role in the dairy industry.

Throughout the convention, participants will be able to view the sale cattle on display, visit the dairy bar, and tour the commercial exhibits. The two-day convention ends with the convention sale at 7 p.m. on Friday.

Tickets for the convention must be received by Tuesday, February 1. For lodging reservations, participants should contact the Clarion Hotel at 1-800-692-7315 or (717) 243-1717 and indicate that they are with the Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

Sen. Wenger Challenges Farm And Home Foundation To Continue Ag Support

provide a facility that serves so many needs," said Luke Brubaker, president of the Foundation that oversees the center. The Foundation conducted its annual banquet at the center on Monday night.

According to Larry Weaver, vice president, numerous maintenance projects were conducted to the building and on the grounds. The parking lot was expanded and macadamed, and a new roof was put on the building.

The money to upgrade the building came from the $200,000 received from the state for the 1.7 acres condemned due to the Route 30 bypass.

Brubaker said a substantial amount of revenue is earned from the advertising billboards placed on the Farm and Home Center's property.

"We are fortunate to have one of the most valuable spots in the county for advertising," Brubaker said of the location.

One of the ways the Foundation promotes agriculture education is by providing annual scholarships to college freshman entering ag or family science-related fields. This year, the board voted to increase the individual scholarships to $1,600.

Last year seven scholarships were awarded. To date 385 scholarships with a total value of $310,000 have been awarded. The amount of scholarships awarded annually is dependent on the interest earned from a trust fund.

Pennsylvania Senator Noah Wenger said that he remembers his daughter was one of the first to receive a scholarship. The increase from $300 to $1,600 shows what can be accomplished when people work together, Wenger said.

As the banquet speaker, Wenger told the audience that his incentive for going into politics 23 years ago was to become chairman of the ag committee. As a farmer, he wanted to have input into the laws enacted that affect farming.

Because of the need to obtain seniority before being appointed to the ag committee, Wenger never had the opportunity as a member of the house. He moved on to the senate where he was appointed as chairman of the Labor and Industry Committee and later as Republican Caucus chairman, a position he continues to hold.

"There was never anything that brought me more satisfaction than working on ag issues," Wenger said.

Wenger said in his 23 years in legislative work, he knows that issues should serve as the basis of decisions, but politics and personalities play heavily into the legislative process.

One of the most pronounced changes in the political scene since Wenger first went to Harrisburg is that few people understand agricultural workings.

Wenger said, "When I first went to Harrisburg, it was easy to win support for ag issues because many people had agricultural ties."

Times have changed. Environmental and nutrient management issues have thrust ag issues into the limelight often pitting the non-farming community against the farming community.

Nonetheless, Wenger said that he is proud that Pennsylvania is a leader of all states in ag environmental issues. Other states are now looking to Pennsylvania for direction in nutrient management.

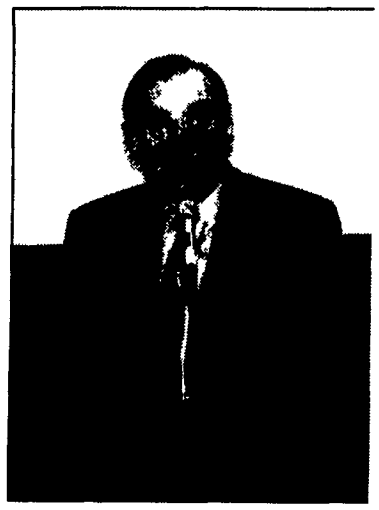
Wenger said that environmental legislation must depend on sound science and not emotionalism and fears.

Pennsylvania leads the way in farmland preservation. The recent additional millions allocated by the state will help reduce the 166 farms on the waiting list, but Wenger said, "While society may want to preserve farmland, they are prone to restrict modern ag practices and want to keep farming as it was years ago."

Wenger said that several years ago, he sponsored the Right to Farm bill to limit public nuisance action and to protect farmers and their livelihoods.

Wenger pushed for drought relief to aid farmers who suffered heavy losses from last summer's weather and financial aid for orchardists who are tackling the plum pox virus.

Although the funds have been allocated, Wenger said that farmers who have had losses must sign up at the county Farm Service office by Feb. 25.



Sen. Noah Wenger

"The ag community needs to abandon its laid back approach and become proactive," Wenger said.

"The past successes of county agriculture are numerous and diverse and enviable in rank. But the challenges of the new century are different than the past. Agriculture deserves support of legislative from the non-farm community and on the federal level. Farmers should get involved. Write letters and visit elected officials. The significance can not be overly estimated."

Of the present 50 senators, only two are farmers and they are retirement age.

"Where will ag influence in legislature come from in the next 23 years?" Wenger asked.

"Not everyone is inclined to be state senators but all should be inclined to get to know those in office," Wenger said.

The following were elected directors of the Home and Farm Foundation: Dorothy Charles, Lancaster; Linda Esbenshade, Mt. Joy; Larry Groff, Lancaster; Jim Kettering, Manheim; J. Robert Kindig, Conestoga; Lloyd Welk, Quarryville; and Paul Wolgemuth Jr., Elizabethtown.

Other board members include Ruth Aker, J. Leroy Esbenshade, Guy Eshelman, Joyce Graybill, Cheryl Hess, Raymond Witmer, Edward Hess, Donna Kreider, John Moose, Gregory Musser, Harold Rohrer, and Alan Strock.

In other business, Paul Wolgemuth Jr. reported net assets of $749,464.

Directory of Growers: Increase Direct Marketing, Your Profits

PHILADELPHIA–Working with the Philadelphia area chapter of the Chefs Collaborative 2000, the Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) is producing a directory of chefs in the Philadelphia region and farmers in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland who are within a 100-mile radius of Philadelphia.

The "Farmer to Chef Directory" is being designed as an opportunity for farmers to explore marketing possibilities with local chefs. The directory will list chefs who are interested in purchasing directly from local farmers and farmers who are interested in supplying local restaurants.

Listings in the directory will provide growers with an immediate resource for finding interested chefs and a description of their needs. It will also provide a foundation of information and contacts for coordinating between farmers and chefs. PASA's "Farmer to Chef Director" for southwestern Pennsylvania led to a significant increase in sales for farmers in that area.

PASA is gathering information on farmers who want to sell directly to restaurants now. Growers need to provide contact information, a description of their products, and availability timetable. In addition to alphabetical farm entries, grower data will also be sorted and listed by farm products and county location.

Corn, Soybean Conference Feb. 8

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Dennis Avery, director of global food issues at the Hudson Institute, is scheduled to be the keynote speaker at the upcoming Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean conference Feb. 8 here at the Radisson Penn Harris Convention Center.

Avery's topic will be "The Crucial Moment for American Agriculture."

Avery believes that producers are looking at one of the biggest opportunities in farming history. Mark your calendar and plan to attend.

Another featured speaker on the program this year is Gene Lewis from the United Soybean Board. Lewis is a Hardinsburg, Ind. soybean and corn farmer who will be making two presentations: one on "Ag Perspectives For 2000" and another on "New Uses Development and the Soybean Board."

The conference will also feature Gene Gantz, a crop insurance consultant, with a session on the upcoming significant changes in crop insurance and how they will affect Pennsylvania grain farmers. Gene has considerable experience working with midwest producers using crop insurance as part of financing and grain marketing programs.

The conference will also review the potential of lightbars for sprayer guidance. This is a precision ag application that some corn producers think has a real fit in Pennsylvania. The program will also feature a panel of grain merchants who will share some of their thoughts on the current GMO situation.

The conference will also feature numerous industry exhibits, Five-Acre Corn Club awards, and the Pennsylvania Soybean Contest results. The event is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board, the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, and Penn State.

Registration is $20, which includes lunch. For more information on attending or exhibiting at the conference, contact the Penn State Agronomy Department at (814) 865-2543.

Genex/CRI Dairy Day Planned

YORK (York Co.) — Area dairy producers are invited to attend the Genex/CRI Dairy Day program Thursday, Feb. 3 at the Dover Fire Hall in York County. The morning session begins with milk, coffee and donuts courtesy of Genex/CRI at 9:30 a.m.

The spread of Johne's disease is one of the most serious health threats to dairy producers in recent years. The tendency of the disease to exist in a herd for years before diagnosis makes it especially challenging to manage. Dr. David Wolfgang from Penn State's Veterinary Science Department will update producers on practical tips for Johne's control and management. He will provide information about Pennsylvania's Johne's certification program and its use in your herd.

Extension agent Tim Beck will provide a brief discussion of important biosecurity management practices that should be part of your regular dairy management routine. Preventive measures are always prefered over trying to treat a disease already in progress, so tips for preventing disease spread will be featured.

Peter Tozer, dairy systems planner from Penn State Dairy and Animal Science, will update producers on important items if you are considering contract heifer rearing. With the trend toward larger, more specialized dairy operations, some producers have started businesses as contract heifer raisers. Tozer has done research on the costs involved with contract heifer rearing and he will provide practical tips on establishing a cost structure for both the grower and the dairyman. Tips on important contact provisions will also be addressed.

The educational program will run from 9:30 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. with lunch sponsored by Genex/CRI. There is no charge for lunch, but participants are asked to request a complimentary ticket in advance from either Larry Amspacher at (717) 767-4171 or from Penn State Extension York Customer Service desk at (717) 840-7408.

During the afternoon Genex/CRI district meeting, Tom Lyons, CEO for Genex/CRI, will address the group.

To be listed in the survey is free. However, to help cover the costs of compiling, printing, and mailing the document this winter, PASA is charging $10 for you to receive a copy of the completed directory, including its valuable listing of chefs.

As a nonprofit organization, PASA works to increase the number of farms and the economic viability of existing farms. This effort to link farmers and chefs is part of PASA's Community FARM Initiative Program. The Chefs Collaborative 2000 is a national network of chefs who promote sustainable cuisine by teaching children, supporting local farmers, educating one another, and inspiring the public to choose good, clean food.

If you want your farm included in the directory, contact Ted Patterson at (610) 688-4895, or Kristen Markley at (814) 349-9856.

FORM 941 USING A PERSONAL COMPUTER AND A MODEM

Beginning April 1, IRS will be offering the opportunity for businesses to prepare and file their Form 941, "Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return," using a personal computer, modem, and off-the-shelf tax preparation software.

The tax return information will be transmitted to the IRS through a third party. This program provides another option for filing Form 941 electronically, which will save time and reduce paperwork. Additionally, it supports and enhances the IRS's initiative to expand the use of electronic filing options overall.

The 941 OLF program is available to businesses, software developers, and/or transmitters.

To file the Form 941, electronically, an application must be submitted as required by Revenue Procedure 97-47. Applicants must pay special attention to revenue procedure Section 9. In addition, applicants must obtain Publication 1855, "Technical Specification Guide for the Electronic Filing of Form 941, Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return." Applicants must agree to transmit an initial electronic transmission (known as a test file), which must be completed by the test file due date preceding the corresponding quarter's due date. The IRS will notify each applicant in writing regarding approval or denial of their application.

The 941 On-Line Filing (OLF) Program is easy and convenient. Business filers must first apply for a personal identification number (PIN) by completing the letter of application (LOA) included in the software and file it electronically with the third party transmitter. The third party transmitter will receive the LOA from the business filer and electronically transmit the information to the Austin Service Center (AUSC).

The business filer will then receive a PIN in the mail from the service. The PIN is used in lieu of the business filer's signature for the electronic return. Once they receive the PIN, participants can file Form 941 electronically.

For more information about the program, call the IRS e-file Help Desk Austin Service Center, (512) 460-8900. (This is not a toll-free number).

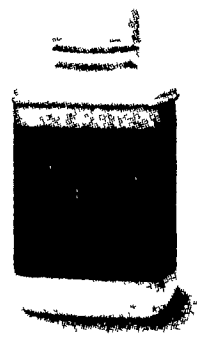
It scares wild garlic as much as garlic scares vampires.



Wild garlic bites. The smallest amount can dramatically decrease the quality and value of your harvested wheat crop. DuPont Harmony® Extra herbicide is your best defense against wild garlic.* It'll also stand its ground against chickweed, henbit, buttercup, mayweed and other scary weeds—some 60 in all. And its complete rotation flexibility allows you to double crop to soybeans. Don't let wild garlic take a bite out of your profits. Fight back with Harmony® Extra.

Colonial Garb, Homeschooling, Heritage Color Yellow Hill Farm

JINNY WILT
Adams Co. Correspondent

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.)–If you're looking for thornless blackberries, fall red and golden raspberries, a peaceful respite in a rural setting, and a major house restoration project interspersed with lively conversation from three young, homeschooled women, take a trip to Yellow Hill Farm near here.

The Bishop sisters–Meghan, 17; Laura, 12; and Cassie, 10, add sparkle to conversations about their experience with homeschooling and a 4-H project.

Originally from Connecticut, the family moved to Adams County when father, Craig Bishop, changed jobs. In addition to his full-time job, Bishop plants 28 acres of land. He has planted one-half acre in rows of raspberries and 400 feet of blackberries, watered with trickle irrigation. In season., the berries are served up to the public on a pick-your-own basis. Bishop is also restoring what the family calls "This Old House."

A major addition project, which has involved two-plus years, is evolving into a bigger kitchen, a bedroom for Meghan and two new bathrooms, one with a bathtub and the other in combo with a laundry. Other areas of the home have already been restored and convey Bishop's carpentry talents and creativity.

He has exposed the old logs in some areas of the home and in other areas used cured wood from pine trees on the property installing it as beautiful flooring and doors. In keeping with the theme of the exposed logs in the downstairs, he has installed logs from the property in the ceilings of Meghan's bedroom and a bathroom.

If this isn't enough, his full-time job involves engineering and design at Qualastat Electronics, in Gettysburg which manufactures wire harnesses and cable assemblies.

As for wife and mother Natalie Bishop, a former agricultural school teacher, has undertaken the task of teaching her own children at home. Home schooling is a full-time job, although she finds time for volunteering in the community.

While Meghan has a few years of public school experience and Laura went to public school kindergarten, Cassie has never been in the public school system at all.

Ask Meghan how she, as a homeschooled teenager, socializes with youths her own age and you'll get a quick and firm response, that "you do it just like anyone else. You say 'hello, I'm so-and-so' and go from there."

And don't get her started on the benefits of being homeschooled. She wonders, with a demeanor of near shock, at why all students don't want to do the same thing when she considers the problems and fears facing youngsters in today's public schools.

Craig notes that "Homeschoolers tend to be more academic than sports oriented." His older daughter is an example of this for she has been accepted and starts in the fall at Florida College, a small Christian school in Temple Terrace, where she plans to earn a degree in history/english with a minor in music.

Natalie said she believes that homeschooled children "have a mature attitude because they've already been in the real world. Kids who've been raised in a school system have been nurtured in a closed environment and they don't know what the real world is like. They don't know what a deadline is like.

"They don't know what punctuality is like. They don't know what actually completing a paper and doing the research on your own is like. They've always had the teacher standing over them telling them the next step in the project. Not until many students get to college do they experience this. I think that is probably the biggest advantage to homeschoolers in high school.

"Their mom is there, but she's not saying you must do this next chapter. Meghan knows she must get through this math book in the course of the school year and if she dawdles on math because she's spending time on history, or she's doing a whole run of orchestra concerts–Meghan performs with three orchestras–and she doesn't get math, English, or history done, she's going to sweat it like crazy.

"She learns to pace herself. I think that's an advantage because that is the real world," Natalie concludes.

The girls have found a lot of fun and new experiences and learning in a recent sewing project.

They are members of the Biglerville Busy Beavers 4-H Club and last year, as seamstresses, completed dresses and undergarments from the 1860s.

Meghan said, "The dresses came about because we hated modeling for the 4-H Fashion Review." When their mother suggested it might be fun to have a big, graceful hoop skirt to sweep across the stage, the thought of modeling became more tolerable.

And, Laura adds, living in Gettysburg they knew they always enjoyed the Civil War-era dresses. A store nearby to buy their dress patterns was also handy.

Meghan said the girls did a lot of research looking in books and on the Internet so that the dresses would be authentic.

She explained, "The well-dressed lady wore eight layers and that was the minimum you had to wear or you were considered very immodest. First there was a chemise, then drawers, an underpetticoat–and if it was cold you might wear more than one under-petticoat."

At this point, she interjects with a laugh, that you learn very quickly to put your stockings and shoes on first or otherwise you won't be able to get them on. She admits she learned this the hard way.

Next come garments such as corsets, a hoop skirt, and an over-petticoat so that the bones of the hoop skirt don't show through the dress.

Meghan and Laura get into their apparel, which takes a bit of time, after they have noted that all such dresses always open down the front and are closed with hooks and eyes or buttons and button holes.

Laura chuckles when she explains that she decided not to use hooks and eyes, "but then found that button holes weren't that easy either."

Meghan continues that the Civil War-era woman always wore collars and under sleeves "because back then the first part of any garment to wear out was the cuffs and collars and they didn't have much material. They had plenty of time, but no material. What they did instead was made undersleeves (a separate piece from the dress) which would have cuffs on it and when the cuff wore out they just made another undersleeve. The collar would be basted in and when it wore out, you made a new collar or turned it around.

Cassie is not to be left out of these sewing projects because she made, not only a Sacajawea costume that she wore when she participated in the county level 4-H Fashion Revue. She has also made a youngster's dress from the 1860s, which she wears with great pride.

The three have worn their dresses and marched in several parades. Meghan advanced to 4-H State Days at Penn State with her dress, and Laura, who is a junior 4-H'er, was a rosette winner on the regional level with her dress.

In addition to these activities, Laura plays cello in two orchestras. She also writes and edits a monthly newspaper via Internet with a homeschool friend from the Pittsburgh area. She also enjoys writing serial stories and has started her own mystery series of chapter books.

Cassie was studying violin, but currently in looking for another teacher. She is a lover of animals–as a rescued sparrow in a box in the front room attests. She especially likes cats, bugs, nature, reading, and helping outside.

The Bishop family, Meghan, Laura, Craig, Natalie and Cassie, gather for a picture. The girls are homeschooled at the couple's Yellow Hill Farm, where they operate a pick-your-own raspberry and blackberry business.

The Bishop Sisters, Meghan, 17, Cassie, 10, and Laura, 12, pose in Colonial dresses they each made. The girls, who are homeschooled, marched in several parades in their 1860's garb.

Mother Natalie Bishop adds a finishing touch to daughter Laura's bonnet. Laura made an 1860's dress with undergarments and as a junior 4-H'er was a rosette winner in the 4-H regional fashion revue.

HOMESTEAD NOTES

Does this make sense?

Everytime I open a pack of my favorite soap, that question bugs me.

This soap comes wrapped, several bars to a pack, in an outer covering of clear plastic. Once you cut your way through that, each individual bar must then be opened as well. And each is wrapped in not one, but two layers of coated paper.

Like, this is soap, man. Soap. I have no intention of eating it, or feeding it to children, or even to the dog, who generally eats anything which stands still long enough.

Think about it. Lots of food items aren't even packaged quite this tamper-proof. Milk boxes can be opened with one hand (though I always mangle them). Butter comes in a simple waxed box with quarters wrapped in one layer of paper. A loaf of bread is more easily opened than cat food. Even frozen sandwich steaks which I opened a few days ago were protected with fewer layers of packaging than this soap.

But years ago, I realized that, thus wrapped, the soap stays very soft. And melts away like a sugar cube when left bobbing around in water. Which means you have to buy it more often.

Is that considered "marketing?"

Overdone soap wrappings is just one example of modern marketing and packaging which increasingly amuses–occasionally irritates–me. How frequently is it, I often wonder while slicing away through layers of miscellaneous wrapping materials which stuff our trashcans, that the package cost far exceeds the value of the food inside?

Individual serving-sizes of popular soft drinks is another marketing angle which fascinates me. We are minimal soft drink consumers, and what we do drink is generally generic-branded, two- or three-liter containers which occasionally go flat before being totally consumed. They usually cost well under a dollar.

Those individual serving-sized ones, of much smaller volume, often sell for twice the price of the large bottles. Or in a major airport, maybe three or four times the cost. But, they are undeniably convenient. The value is–apparently–in the packaging.

Deliveries of assorted repair parts is a frequent occurrence at our front door, especially during the machinery-intensive field-work seasons. The Farmer regularly comes shaking his head at finding some tiny part or gasket buried in layers of packaging and sent in a cardboard package measuring something like 2-feet X 18-inches X 12 inches.

Our grandsons love "popping" the little sections of plastic bubble wrap in which these arrivals often come, so it does have entertainment value. And then, like the mountain of other packaging materials, it feeds the trash can.

As a long-time rebel against unnecessary cost of things, (read "cheap"), I long ago developed an attitude about the overpackaging of that soap. So as soon as a new supply of it arrives home with the groceries, I attack those irritating three layers of packaging and unwrap the individual bars. While they're still butter-soft, I slice them in half for easier handling, then pitch them into the bathroom closet to air-dry for awhile before using. It's amazing how much longer they last.

Sure, it's just a tiny victory over overdone modern packaging. But tiny victories are better than none.

Just when I smugly think I'm ahead of some of these marketing gimmicks, I get a comeuppance.

Like a few days ago, when I tossed three whole chickens in my shopping cart. They were a good buy, I use them often, and had room for them in the freezer. But later, I wondered.

The promotional sign on them had a fine-print phrase at the bottom: limit of three.

Had I gotten three because I really needed three–or because there was a limit of that?

And, how many people bought three who didn't need that many at all?

Focus on Ground Beef

Questions about ground meat or hamburger have always been in the top five food topics of calls to the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline. Here are the most frequently asked questions:

•Why is pre-packaged ground beef red on the outside and sometimes dull, grayish brown inside?

Oxygen from the air reacts with meat pigment to form a bright red color which is usually seen on the surface of meat purchased in the supermarket. The pigment responsible for the red color in meat is oxymyoglobin, a substance found in all warm-blooded animals. Fresh cut meat is purplish in color. The interior of the meat may be grayish brown due to lack of oxygen. If all meat in the package has turned gray or brown, it may be beginning to spoil.

Beef fat may be added to hamburger, but not ground beef, if the meat is ground and packaged at a USDA inspected plant. A maximum of 30% fat by weight is allowed in either hamburger or ground beef. Both hamburger and ground beef can have seasonings, but no water, phosphates, extenders, or binders added. They must be labeled in accordance with Federal Standards and Labeling Policy and marked with a USDA-inspected label.

However, most ground beef is ground and packaged in local stores rather than in food processing plants under USDA inspection. Even so, the Federal labeling laws on fat content apply. Most states and cities set standards for store-packaged ground beef which, by law, cannot be less than Federal standards. If products in retail stores were found to contain more than 30% fat by weight, they would be considered "adulterated" and subject to enforcement under Federal law.

•Why does ground beef release a lot of "juice" while cooking?

In making ground beef, some retail stores grind the meat while it is still frozen. Ice crystals in the frozen meat break down the cell walls, permitting the release of meat juices during cooking. The same thing happens after ground meat is frozen at home.

•How long can I keep left over cooked hamburgers? How should they be reheated?

If ground beef is refrigerated promptly after cooking, it can be safely refrigerated for about 3 or 4 days. If frozen, it should keep its quality for about four months. When reheating fully-cooked patties or casseroles containing ground beef, be sure the internal temperature reaches 165° F.

•What causes ground beef patties to shrink while cooking?

All meat will shrink in size and weight during cooking. The amount of shrinkage will depend on its fat and moisture content, the temperature at which the meat is cooked, and how long it is cooked. Basically, the higher the cooking temperature, the greater the shrinkage. Cooking ground beef at moderate temperatures will reduce shrinkage and help retain juices and flavor. Overcooking draws out more fat and juices from ground beef, resulting in a dry, less tasty product.

•Is it dangerous to eat raw or "rare" ground beef?

Yes. Raw meat may contain harmful bacteria. The USDA recommends not eating or tasting raw or undercooked ground beef. To be sure all bacteria are destroyed, cook meat loaf, meatballs, casseroles, and hamburgers to 160° F. Use a meat thermometer to assure proper degree of doneness.

For additional food safety information about meat, poultry, or eggs, call the toll-free USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1 (800) 535-4555. It is staffed by home economists, dietitians and food technologists from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time, year round. An extensive selection of food safety recordings can be heard 24 hours a day using a touch-tone phone.

1 cup pizza sauce
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese
Pepperoni, green peppers, anchovies, etc.

Spoon pizza sauce on muffin halves. Cover with shredded cheese. Use pizza toppings to create eyes, noses, and lips on the face of pizza. Bake at 350 degrees until cheese is completely melted. Makes 4 faces.

Featured Recipe

Tioga County Dairy Princess Stefanie Long believes this easy-to-do recipe is just the thing for the new millennium.

She writes, "Pizza has always been one of my favorite foods. I love mozzarella on my pizza.

"Growing up I used to try almost to make almost anything. I learned to love this recipe using refrigerator rolls. It's a fun way to get children involved in making their favorite food."

PAT-A-PIZZA

1 can refrigerated biscuits
1¼ cup spaghetti sauce, any flavor
1 cup mozzarella cheese, shredded
Pepperoni (optional)

Open can of biscuits, place on greased cookie sheet. Press down each one separately so it is thin like a pizza crust. Add 2 teaspoons spaghetti sauce per pizza. Sprinkle with mozzarella cheese on top the way you like it. Bake at 350 degrees for 8-10 minutes or until edges are golden brown. This recipe is for 10 rolls and can easily be doubled.

"What is pizza without breadsticks?" Stefanie asks. Try this recipe. It is almost like ordering out but having more fun making everything in your own kitchen.

BREADSTICKS

4 cups flour
4 teaspoons sugar
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
½ cup butter, melted

Combine all of the ingredients to make a soft dough. Knead for 2-3 minutes. Divide and form into the shape of a hot dog but only the thickness of your thumb, and twist like a rope. Roll in melted butter in a 9x13-inch pan. Bake at 450 degrees for 15-20 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with a sauce.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — This year's Sale of Champions featured the best in their class and the best ever to be shown at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, according to Farm Show Director Dennis Grumbine.

"The quality of livestock shown at this year's Farm Show was a lot better than we have ever had in all three species," said Grumbine. "This year's top eight or ten in each species could have easily won the championship titles just a few years ago."

Bill and Nancy Campbell of Hosses' Steak & Sea House purchased three champions this year. The grand champion market swine owned by Debbie McAllister of Centre Co. brought $3,100 from Hosses. Hatfield Meats bought the reserved champion market swine for $2,000 from Ryan Balzano of Cambria Co.

Both the grand champion and reserved champion market steers were purchased by Hosses. Carl Detwiler of Bedford Co.'s grand champion steer went for $20,000, while the reserved champion owned by Justin Claycomb of Bedford Co. brought $4,000.

Bill Fox of Foxes Markets purchased the grand champion junior market lamb for $3,600 from Lucas Svonavec of Somerset Co. Michael Burrell of York Co. sold his reserved grand champion junior market lamb for $2,200 to Lebanon Valley Farmers Bank, Great Valley Bank, and Kesslers in LeMoyne.

While no record sales were made this year, the Sale of Champions brought in a total of $34,900 to benefit the scholarship foundation and agriculture's youth.

Pa. Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes, Jr., remarked that the

Cook's Question

ANSWER — Janet Weisner, Kempton, wanted recipes to make yeast breads in the following flavors: strawberry, blueberry, apple cinnamon, and cream cheese. Thanks to Catherine from Strasburg for sending the following recipes. However, some of the recipes are quick breads, not made with yeast, which Janet specified. Anyone have fruit flavor breads made with yeast? Send them in.

Cream Cheese Bread

⅓ cup milk
1 cup diced cream cheese
¼ cup butter
1 egg
3 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 teaspoon salt
3 cups bread flour
2½ teaspoons active dry yeast

Place ingredients into the pan of bread machine in order suggested by the manufacturer. Select white bread and light crust settings.

Bread With Blueberries

2 eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons melted shortening or vegetable oil
3 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries
½ cup broken walnut pieces

Mix together beaten eggs with sugar. Add milk and shortening or oil.

Sift together flour, salt, and baking powder. Combine the mixtures, stirring only until blended. Carefully fold in fresh or frozen blueberries and broken walnut pieces. Pour into greased 5x12-inch loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50-60 minutes. Cool in pan but try to turn it out of the pan before it is totally cool for easier removal. Can also be made in a regular-sized loaf pan or divided into two pans.

Strawberry Bread

3 cups flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons cinnamon
2 cups sugar
3 eggs, well beaten
2 10-ounce packages frozen strawberries, thawed
1¼ cups oil
1¼ cups chopped pecans

Stir dry ingredients in large bowl, making a well in center of mixture. Mix remaining ingredients and pour into well. Stir enough to dampen all ingredients. Pour into greased, lightly floured loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 45-60 minutes, or when done. Cool before removing from pan.

ANSWER — Sue Slimmer, Myersville, Md., wanted bread recipes made with whole grains. Margaret Strause, Leesport, writes that The Baker's Catalog from King Arthur's Flour contains bread recipes to make manually and with a bread machine. They also have books featuring all varieties of breads. To request a catalog, call 1-800-827-6836, open 24 hours a day, seven days a week and leave a message on the answering machine. If you want to speak to a customer service representative, call between 8:30 a.m. - 8 p.m., EST, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sat., and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sun.

ANSWER — Lydia Murphy-Althouse requested good-tasting bear recipes. Thanks to W.S. Furie, Frederick, Md., who sent in three recipes.

Wild Rice Bruin

2 cups diced, cooked bear meat
1 small diced onion
2 cups V-8 juice
Salt to taste
½ cup wild rice
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons bell pepper
15-ounces canned corn
1 teaspoon chili powder
½ cup brown or white rice

Brown meat in butter and add onion and pepper, sauteing. Add corn, vegetable juice, chili powder, and salt. Add both types rice and cover. Simmer 45 minutes, adding water as needed to prevent over drying.

Roast Bear

4-5 pounds bear roast
Minced garlic cloves
¼ pound bacon
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup red wine

Rub meat with salt, pepper, and garlic. Place meat in roasting pan and cover with bacon strips. Pour wine and sprinkle garlic over roast. Cook uncovered for two hours at 350 degrees then cover and bake until tender (about 2 more hours).

Poatoes, celery, carrots, and whole onions make nice additions to the roasting pan during the final two hours of cooking. It is very important to cook bear meat thoroughly, just as you do with pork, to eliminate possible infection with the trichinosis parasite.

Bear Paws

Skin paws and clean well. Remove claws. Dip in buttermilk and roll in seasoned flour, then sear in a hot skillet to retain moisture. Cook in Dutch oven with a combination of sage, garlic, rosemary, and cloves, in proportion to your personal taste. Add water or wine as needed, simmering until tender.

Farm Learning Center Is Educational Petting Zoo

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) -- What do 16 animals, a bunch of chicks, and colorful posters have in common?

They're all part of the Farm Learning Center. The Penn State Students For Responsible Use Of Animals (SRUA) host the exhibit each year at the Farm Show.

The Farm Learning Center features a petting zoo with an educational twist. Children of all ages come to learn about farm animals and the products they provide.

In its 10th year, the Farm Learning Center highlighted the by-products produced from animals. A by-product is something that is made through the production of something else.

Cosmetics, shampoo, medicines, pet food, and even crayons are all by-products that come from animals.

"Our theme this year was 'Animals Are Everywhere,'" said SRUA Club Adviser Brenda Coe. "There's a lot of things people don't think about that come from animals."

For instance, dice used in board games originally were made from animal horns Lanolin, an ingredient used in hand creams and conditioners, is the greasy substance found in sheep's wool.

The SRUA Club students and advisers spend the entire week at Farm Show. They answer questions and hand out information to the thousands of people who line up to see the animals.

"A lot of kids come back each year looking for specific animals," said Coe. "They remember the ponies that we've had over the years and ask 'Where are they?'"

The goal of the Farm Learning Center is to educate people who are not from farms about animals.

The nonfarm crowd now makes up the largest portion of those attending Farm Show. The students who staff the exhibit show Farm Show visitors how farm animals are used responsibly and what role they play in our lives.

While local farmers provide the animals, SRUA students and advisers put together the displays and make posters about each animal.

Stephanie Herr, a sophomore in animal bioscience, has spent two years in the SRUA Club. She helps at the Farm Learning Center each year.

Herr also helps with the club's other projects, including pet therapy. Pet therapy is a program that involves the students taking dogs and cats into nursing homes and daycare centers.

"It's proven that pets help lower blood pressure and make people happy," said Herr.

She enjoys helping with the Farm Learning Center. "I hold the bunnies and baby animals for people to pet, put animals in front of the people so they can touch them, and answer questions," said Herr.

For Herr, being a part of the SRUA Club is rewarding because it's about respecting animals and using them responsibly. She feels the Farm Learning Center works well because it's hands-on.

"Kids respond really well to soft animals," said Herr. "They love to touch them."

One of the most exciting things that happened at the Farm Learning Center was when a sheep had a baby lamb in front of a crowded audience in 1999.

Herr was really excited this year to see if one of the pigmy goats would have her babies. "She is due this week," said Herr.

"If she has her babies, it's one of the most educational things that can happen here."

Both Herr and Coe admit to being asked questions by people who are concerned about the care of farm animals.

"Most often they just don't understand the reasons why an animal is cared for a certain way," said Coe. "Once we explain the reasons why, they have a better appreciation for the procedure."

For instance, being on the second concourse of the Farm Large Arena, students at the Farm Learning Center have been asked why draft horses have to pull the cart and if it hurts them.

The students explain that the horses are trained as athletes just like people are trained for the Olympics. The horses actually enjoy the competition.

The Farm Learning Center grows in popularity each year, drawing thousands of people and having constant lines at the exhibit.

"We went for being 'Oh, what is this?' to actually being on the Farm Show map," said Coe.

While the kids watch and pet the animals, parents can read over the posters above the pens and learn more about animal care.

At the end of the exhibit, everyone gets an animal stamp on their hand. Brochures on animal care and animal by-products from the People For Responsible Use Of Animals (PRUA) are also available.

WELCOME TO THE New Millennium

Is it or is it not the new millennium? Well, according to NASA scientists, the new millennium actually starts January 1, 2001.

That's because there is no "0" year. Instead, the first millennium started January 1, 1. The first millennium ended 1,000 years later on December 31, 1000. The second millennium started January 1, 1001, and will end 1,000 years later on December 31, 2000.

These dates are based on the calendar that is used around the world. It is called the Gregorian calendar. In the 500s or sixth century, a scholar named Dionysius Exiguus organized a table of dates of Easter, and he set up the Gregorian calendar.

The beginning of this year will bring about many changes. For instance, ask an adult you know if you can look at his/her checkbook. If the date area in the upper right-hand corner of the check has 19_, that person is going to have to get new checks.

However, more people are concerned about the Y2K—Year • Two • 1000—computer problems that may come. Many computer systems have only two digits when it comes to showing a year, like "48" for 1948. Because of this, people are concerned that the "00" for the year 2000 will be read as the year 1900 instead.

HIDDEN PICTURE

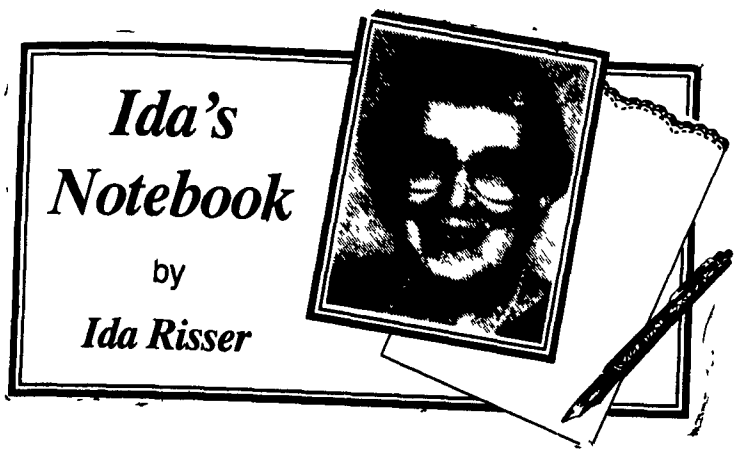
Color in each space that contains a letter.



Our regular routine has been interrupted as Allen has now had his hip replacement just a few months after his triple bypass. Our youngest daughter was with me previously, when he had operations, but this time I sat and waited alone.

Don't spend a day or even six hours in a surgical waiting room by yourself if you do not absolutely have to. As you sit there hour after hour, listening to the phone calls telling other people that the operation went well, you wonder when your your call will come.

Reading will help to pass the time. Drinking a cup of tea will help. But, nothing is better than having a friend or relative to talk to.

Sometimes the family is summoned to a meeting with their pastor and you know the outcome might not be good. Allen came through the operation okay and is anxious to come home. But, he must go through rehabilitation. It will be a long winter.

On a happier note–my flowers keep me busy as I have quite a few Many are blooming as I potted both white and pink begonias and lavender and salmon impatiens this fall. My dark pink cactus bloomed after Christmas and I was given two poinsettia plants. I even kept another poinsettia for my daughter-in-law when her family spent 10 days in Illinois and Indiana.

Our youngest daughter sends me many flowers. We got a big table arrangement of red and pink carnations for our Christmas open house. Just the other day she sent her father a big basket of fruit and nuts

It is nice to be remembered whether we are in good health or bad health.

Food Court Is Favorite Watering Trough For Farm Show Patrons

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – Can you smell the aroma – a mixture of butter, french fries, roast beef sandwiches, fried vegetables, apple cider, and more?

It's the place where most Farm Show visitors stop first and where many of them go right before they're ready to leave. Many spend the entire year in anticipation of a vanilla milkshake and baked potato, while others start at 10 a.m. on their first roast beef sandwich.

Since 1991, the Food Court at the Pennsylvania Farm Show has filled the stomachs of weary Farm Show exhibitors while tantalizing the tastebuds of spectators attending the show.

While some of the stands are run by paid staff during Farm Show week, others are manned completely by volunteers. Some stands donate their profits toward agriculture research and education, while others use the profits for operating expenses.

Each may operate differently, but several things remain the same for all of the stands in the Food Court. They all sell Pennsylvania products, are operated by Pennsylvania commodities or farm organizations, and serve great food.

One of the oldest food stands at the Farm Show is the Pennsylvania Cooperative of Potato Grower's booth, where they sell baked potatoes, french fries, and potato donuts.

According to Tom Lyon, Harrisburg division manager for the cooperative, the booth has been opened since the start of Farm Show.

This year the cooperative expects to sell 30,000 baked potatoes, 12,000 dozen donuts, and 55,000 cups of french fries.

"The baked potatoes are probably the most famous," said Lyon. "But both the french fries and potato donuts are popular, too."

While the people who help at the Potato Growers' stand are paid, most of them have been working there for 20 or more years.

"We have a waiting list of people who want to help at Farm Show," said Lyon. "It's a time to get together with old friends. We put in a lot of hours and have a lot of laughs."

The potato growers use the profits from the stand for research projects, national dues, and the general benefit of the cooperative.

David Smith, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association, expects to sell 70 to 75 thousand milkshakes during this year's Farm Show. According to Smith, the milkshake booth has been opened for more than 30 years at the Farm Show and is run completely by volunteers.

"We partner with the Valley Grange from Lewisberry," explains Smith. "They provide all of the labor, and we give half of the profits to the Grange."

Smith can remember when the milkshakes and baked potatoes were found out in the main exhibit hall, along with food stands run by area church groups.

"One thing I can tell you," said Smith. "People come to Farm Show to get a milkshake."

The Dairymen's Association also partners with the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess & Promotion Services (PDPPS) to run a parfait booth next to the

On The Farm With Lebanon County Dairy Princess

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Most teen-agers try to get out of work, but Amanda Martin is a dairy princess who relishes the rewards of labor.

According to her parents Eugene and Kathleen Martin, it was Amanda's idea to switch their herd to three times daily milking.

The Martins milk 95 registered Holsteins, raise their own heifers, and operate a 60,000 broiler chicken house.

Although the Martins' three children have been heavily involved in the day-to-day farming operation, Amanda is the one who is most enthusiastic. Perhaps that is because the Martins purchasing the 163-acre farm the year Amanda was born in 1981.

She grew up playing with the calves and tagging along in the barn.

According to family tales, as a toddler, Amanda spoiled the calves so much that they acted more like loyal puppies than bovine cattle. The calves jumped over the fence whenever they saw Amanda coming and learned how to unlatch the gate.

The family teased Amanda that she is part Eskimo because frigid weather doesn't bother her. Maybe being born in December acclimated her to the cold from birth.

Whatever the reason, cold weather doesn't mean Amanda spends less time outside. She takes responsibility for almost all the calf feeding, cow clipping, and at least one daily milking shift, although she is still a high school senior.

"Working with calves is my specialty," Amanda said. In addition to feeding, she sees that each receives registration.

"She is very creative in naming the calves," her mother said of such names as Lion King, Hale-Bopp, and other names connected to events happening at the time of the calf's birth.

In addition to caring for her parents' herd, Amanda owns 14 cows and heifers.

It's been a year since the family has gone to milking three times a day. Each shift requires two people for 1½ to 2 hours of milking in the stall barn. The family tries not to schedule the same person to milk more than twice daily. That requires hiring a couple to help with the milking done at 5:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., and 9:30 p.m.

Generally, Amanda works the 9:30 p.m. shift and additional shifts on weekends and days off school.

The rolling herd average is 25,300 pounds. The family uses total mixed rations mostly with grain raised on their farm.

Eugene said that the summer drought has forced them to buy grain this year, but the family considers themselves fortunate to have been able to salvage enough grain for forage.

During the growing season, double cropping puts more pressure on them to harvest, spread manure, and replant. Eugene and his son do the majority of the fieldwork, and Kathleen helps out. During seasonal field work, it is not unusual for Andy, a full-time diesel mechanic, to work until midnight in the fields. Andy also helps clean out the chicken house.

Allison, 23, no longer lives on the farm. She teaches biology and animal science at Cedar Crest High School. But she continues to drop by the farm and often brings along some of her school students to show them a working farm.

Eugene grew up on the neighboring farm to one he now owns. He said, "I wouldn't want to do anything other than farm. We are blessed that we got to work with our children. They did whatever we asked them to do on the farm, but we always allowed them to pursue sports, and attend conventions and other off-farm events."

His wife grew up on a hog and beef farm, but had no adjustment problems to dairy. She said, "I bond with the animals. I'm like Amanda."

With a strong attachment to animals, milking and farming in general, it seemed natural to want to become a dairy princess.

Last June, Amanda was crowned the Lebanon County Dairy Princess and she's been busy ever since combining farm chores with off-the-farm promotions.

One of the most hilarious promotional events for Amanda was the milk chugging contest advertised at the fair. Contestants were in for a surprise when they were given baby bottles with nipples to chug — Amanda's idea.

"The crowd roared," Amanda said of the event that is sure to be remembered throughout a lifetime by the 12 contestants.

Helping Amanda with county dairy promotion are alternates Stacy Weidler and Amy Burkhart; dairy maids, Hannah Bomgardner, Kathryn Buck, Heather Chernich, and Sarah Krall; and Li'l Miss dairy princesses, Sarah Smith and Lydia Smith.

"We have a big court, so we try to have at least two representatives at each promotion," Amanda said of the county, which is known to have an active dairy promotion committee.

During a December dairy promotion at the local mall, Amanda had the idea to decorate a tree with cow key rings, which the promotional committee were distributing. Other promotional activities for the dairy princess include handing out ribbons at the fair, handing out ice cream, and helping make a giant ice cream sundae. Whenever she visits classrooms, Amanda finds that preschoolers and elementary students are enthralled by learning to make pudding and butter by using individual containers for mixing and shaking.

Amanda and Alternate Stacy have earned the reputation of getting lost whenever they travel together to promotions.

The two also team up for harmless pranks, one which hit the local news with a half-page color picture. In a novel take-off on the national campaign that poses the question to consumers, "got milk?", the two michievious teens had spray painted hay bales left in several farmers fields with the words, "got milk."

Promotion isn't all fun and games. Recently Amanda rushed from making radio spots at an Ephrata station to make some more spots for a Lebanon station.

All her dairy promotions aren't limited to bona fide promotions. Amanda gives her friends "got milk" T-shirts, and expects them to eat plenty of ice cream whenever they are around her. She enjoys entertaining friends at her home, where she serves milk punches, cheeses, and many home-cooked creations made with dairy products.

For two years in a row, Amanda has earned grand champion showmanship awards with her favorite cow Belinda at the local Lebanon County Area Fair. Although Amanda shows cows at the local and 4-H district shows, she does not compete at the state level with dairy. Instead, she enters vo-tech projects such as dried flower arrangements.

This year at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Amanda clinched "best of show" for her dried flower wall design and received three first placings and one third placing for other flower arrangements.

Amanda's skill in floral designing helps out with gift giving. For Christmas, she made dried floral

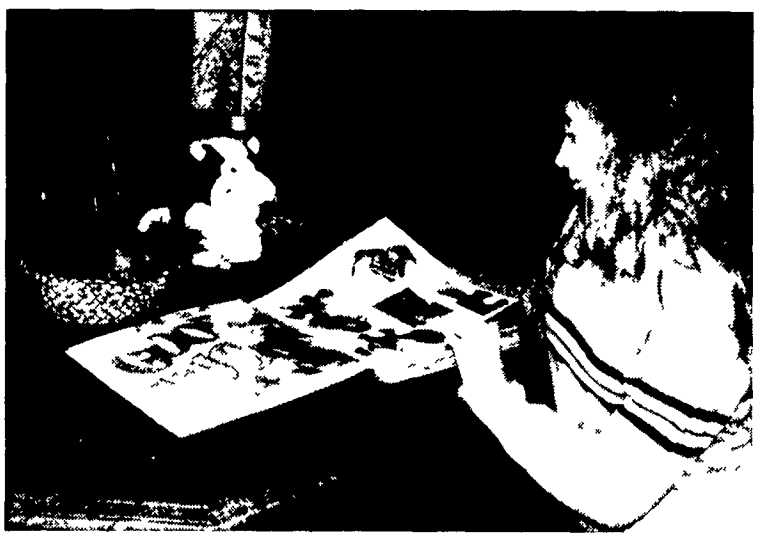
The Martin family milk 95 cows and operate a 60,000-head broiler house on their 163-acre farm in Lebanon County.

Milk is the beverage of choice in the Martin family. From left are Andy, 22; Allison, 23; Amanda, 18; and parents, Kathleen and Eugene.



At the state pageant, Amanda's scrapbook won honorable mention for its novel "puzzle theme" called "Pieces of My Year," which puts together her many promotional efforts.

For two years in a row, Belinda helped Amanda win showmanship at the Lebanon Area Fair. "She's my favorite. She's really tame," Amanda said of the 14 cows she owns.

arrangements for all her aunts. She also made the table centerpieces for the FFA banquet.

Amanda was selected as student of the month at the Lebanon County Career and Technology Center and Cedar Crest High School.

She is president of both the county FFA and the Cedar Crest chapter. Her FFA team won parlimentary procedure at the state level. Amanda is also a member of the 4-H Dairy Judging team and a former 4-H Dairy Bowl member.

Despite her heavy involvement on the farm, Amanda doesn't limit herself to ag related interests. She is team captain of the school's hockey team, a member of the National Honor Society, and enjoys line dancing and riding her Tennesee walking horse. She is active in the youth group of the Cornerstone Community Church.

In addition to being passionate about milk promotion, Amanda said that she is also fanatical about Dodge pick-up trucks.

On a more traditional female level, Amanda collects Merry Moos. Her mother collects cow magnets and has shelves of tins and Wheatie boxes featuring favorite sports heros.

Although the parents primarily oversee the broiler operation, Amanda helps with poultry vaccination.

Whenever the chicken house is empty, Amanda in-line skates out the Martin's long lane to reach the chicken houses. She takes her boom box and hockey stick and uses the empty chicken house as a skating rink to practice hockey.

Amanda is tentatively planning to attend New York's Alfred State for a two-year course in animal or dairy science. Since Amanda was first in the county for FFA dairy judging, she hopes to utilize her experience by becoming a member of the college judging team.

But before she heads off for college, Amanda is seriously considering signing up for a two- to six-month stint as an FFA job exchangee to Australia or New Zealand.

"Amanda is a huge asset on the farm," her mom said. "We feel really honored that she likes to work on the farm."

In fact, her parents sometimes take mini vacations by leaving Amanda in charge of the dairy operation.

Although her parents will welcome Amanda back to the farm with open arms after college, they want their daughter to pursue other options to make sure farming is what she really wants for a career.

About a year ago, the Martin farm was designated as a preserved farm in Lebanon County.

"We decided to do it because the children wanted us to do it," Martin said. "They are the ones who will be most affected by the decision — more than us. They all were positive that this was the direction they wanted us to go," Martin said.

Amanda knows what direction she wants consumers to go: "Use more dairy products."

From her repertoire of recipes, Amanda shares this one for readers to try.

Cancelled Checks: A Thing Of The Past?

Are cancelled checks becoming history?

According to the Federal Reserve, paper checks are still the currency of choice.

Even with the increase in consumers' use of credit cards, debit cards and electronic fund transfers, the majority of retail payments in 1998 were made using paper checks.

By 2020, two decades into the next century, or perhaps before, retail payments by check may be a rare event.

You don't think so? Well, let's examine changes that might have occurred with your own bank. During the past three years, has your bank:

- added a fee to a basic account to return paper checks?
- increased the fee to return cancelled checks?
- introduced a service where images of your cancelled checks are made and returned?
- offered a safe-keeping option which allows you to get copies of selected cancelled checks as needed to prove payment?
- offered free access to your checking or savings account by the Internet?
- offered bill payment of occasional bills by accessing your checking account by the Internet?
- offered automatic bill payment for recurring monthly bills such as mortgage payments or utilities?

Banks across the country appear to be phasing out customers' use of paper checks or weaning them into accepting electronic means of payment.

Are you adapting to the changes or are you still holding on to paper checks? Chances are you are doing a little of both. If you are doing one or more of the following, you may be on the road to accepting more forms of electronic payment.

- Use an automated teller machine one or more times each month.
- Use your credit card to pay an occasional bill by telephone.
- Use your credit card to pay for groceries and almost all other purchases.
- Preauthorize deposits such as direct deposit of your paycheck.
- Preauthorize payments for recurring bills in regular (mortgage) or irregular (telephone). (With the increasing cost of first class postage stamps, preauthorizing bill payments is an economical choice for many).
- Use a debit card more frequently than writing a check.

Highest Quality Animals Ever Sold At This Year's Sale Of Champions

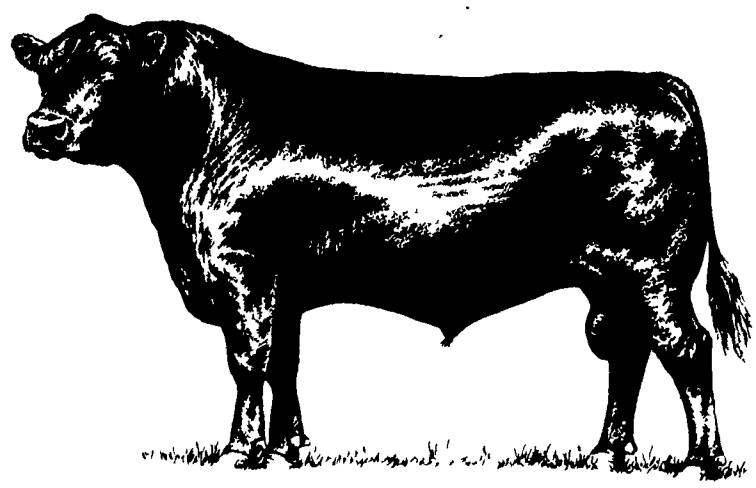
group of animals this year was outstanding. "I have never seen quality animals run so long and deep in every class."

Year after year Hosses Steak & Sea House has been a faithful supporter of the Farm Show Sale of Champions and Junior Livestock Sale. According to Bill Campbell, they plan to purchase a dozen animals at this year's sale.

"We support the sale because we feel like we're helping to make the world a better place by supporting agriculture," said Nancy Campbell, Bill's wife and public relations director for Hosses.

The Campbells donated the grand champion market steer to the Central Pennsylvania Food Bank, while they plan to put the other animals they purchased into the buy-back program.

"We support 51 livestock sales at local fairs throughout Pennsylvania," said Campbell. "We support a lot of community programs, but we're more heavily involved in supporting both 4-H and FFA than any other."



Bill Fox of Foxes Markets has also been a longtime supporter of the Sale of Champions at Farm Show. He has purchased animals for the last 29 years and set the record for the highest bid on the champion lamb in 1993. Fox expects to buy 100 lambs at the 2000 Farm Show.

"We believe that Pennsylvania's youth programs are some of the most worthwhile causes we can support," said Fox. "We like to support the communities that support our stores."

The lambs that Fox purchases at the Farm Show will be sold next week in his stores during their annual lamb sale. "Customers look forward to the sale because the quality of lambs is just outstanding."

Both the Pennsylvania Lieutenant Governor Mark Schweicker and Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes, Jr., were on hand to encourage bidders and commend the 4-Hers and FFA members who exhibited at this year's show.

"We're proud of our kids," said Schweiker. "We're here today to acknowledge the day to day operations of the farmers, who fuel a $44 billion dollar enterprise in Pennsylvania. Everything we raise here this morning goes to see that our young people stay in agriculture."

He wants to break the addiction and asks if readers know of any sensible remedy that relieves nasal congestion. Thanks to Catherine, Lancaster, who writes that her chiropractor instructed her to use a light film of mineral ice (sold in drugstores and by chiropractors) on her face to alleviate sinus congestion. Make an arc over each eyebrow, a smile under each cheekbone, and a minute dot on either side of the nose at eye level. Be careful not to get any in the eye. The arcs follow the sinus cavities and the nose dots encourage watering through tear ducts, which are a natural drain for sinuses. This method works wonders for any sinus congestion Catherine gets, including colds.

The other alternative Catherine recommends are Breathe Right strips, which she found works marvels for cold and nasal congestion for herself and her children.

milkshake stand. The booth has been opened for four years and sells about 2,000 sundaes each year. It's staffed by dairy princess volunteers, and local committees receive the profits.

Profits from the milkshake booth benefit scholarship programs and competitions run by the Dairymen's Club. Proceeds are also used for upkeep of the Farm Show milking parlor. The Dairymen's Association is responsible for the milking facilities and owns all of the equipment.

A favorite for many of the farmers attending the Farm Show is the Pennsylvania Livestock Association's booth, where they sell roast beef, ham and cheese, and pork barbeque sandwiches, along with lamb stew and pink lemonade.

According to Jana Malot, a volunteer at the booth, a favorite at the stand is the Livestock Association's horseradish sauce. "We sell the horseradish sauce in jars for people to take home."

Malot can remember coming to Farm Show for roast beef sandwiches as a kid. Now her daughter is a helper at the stand.

The Livestock Association relies mainly on members, family, and friends to help staff the booth during the week, where they expect to sell 45,000 sandwiches during the week.

The Livestock Association funnels all of the profits from the food stand back into supporting agriculture.

Just like Smith and Lyon, Malot's favorite part of working in the Farm Show food court is meeting new people and getting to see old friends.

"Sometimes this is the only place we get to see each other all year."

Cheese Carving Entices Contestants To Act Like Kids Again

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – Norma Lehman of Williamsport was one of hundreds of spectators who watched this year's Cheese Carving Contest on Sunday at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

"I knew if I watched this contest, it would make me want to eat cheese," said Lehman. "Oh, to be a little girl again and just snitch a piece of cheese."

That's exactly the message the American Dairy Association wanted to promote during the Second Annual Cheese Carving Contest held in the Family Living Corner.

According to Deanna Rose, communications specialist, the contest is designed to entice people to learn more about cheese.

"It's just another angle to get the media interested in dairy products," said Rose. "Once we get their attention, we educate them about the variety of cheeses available."

Six contestants were selected to carve in this year's contest. A waiting list remains of people who signed up to be in next year's competition.

The contestants were given 60 minutes to carve a five-pound block of cheddar cheese, using the theme, "Beyond Cheddar 2000."

This year's first prize winner was Brad Russell of Philadelphia. His carving of a leaping frog awarded him $150 and a cheese basket. Brad claimed to not have any previous carving experience, although he did work in an art studio for several years.

Don Teshler of Bethlehem won second place and $100 with his Y2K laptop computer. Third place and $50 went to Sheri Sattazahn of Womelsdorf for her carving of a school bus.

The competition was publicized through local newspapers. One of the six contestants, Cathy Gray of Williamsport, saw the announcement in the "Williamsport Sun Gazette."

"My husband says I got here because I have an overdeveloped skill of cutting things out of the paper," said Cathy.

Cathy's daughter, Crystal, enjoyed the competition. She got to eat the leftover pieces of cheese from Cathy's carving.

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princesses Amanda Gilkinson and Rebecca Kilgore hold the first, second, and third place cheese carvings.

During the amateur contest, york Culinary Institute Chef Mike DeVeny and his culinary students carved a professional carving out of a 40-pound block of cheddar cheese.

Chef DeVeny was one of three judges to select the winners. Debra Summerall, industry relations manager at the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, and Lori Connelly, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess, also helped judge the entries.

During the contest, the spectators were asked to guess what the professional carving was. By the end of the hour, the audience knew it was of a mouse.

Following the competition and professional carving, local cheese purveyor Sam Neff led a discussion on "Beyond Cheddar." He showed Farm Show visitors the varieties of domestic cheeses available in the Harrisburg area. During the discussion, spectators could sample the cheese.

Goats Wrap Up Pennsylvania Farm Show Competition

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Ann Weikel did it again. For about the 13th time, she estimates, one of her homebred LaMancha's took Best Doe in Show at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

In fact, last year at the Farm Show, the same goat, GCH Rockspring Vin Daffy Dandelion, won the same top title and the national title in 1998.

Weikel milks about 90-100 head on her Blairs Mills farm in Huntingdon County. She said that she got her first goat in 1946 and now ships about 200,000 pounds of milk annually.

In the Junior Goat Show, Blair Dubbs took best doe of the show with his American Alpine named Swiss Mocha.

"I'm so excited," said Dubbs of his first time to clinch the best of show award at the state level. Dubbs had shown two breed champions last year.

Dubbs said he and his parents, Don and Gail Dubbs, have about 30 head of Alpines and Sammens on their Granite Station Farm, Gettysburg.

Lynn Benedict from West Virginia judged both the market and breed competitions.

In the junior market goat competition, Ken Reed showed a Boer crossbred goat to capture the champion market goat title.

Reed, son of Kenny and Jana Reed of Derry, Westmoreland County, has been showing animals at the Farm Show for six years.

Matthew Creek, a 4-H member from Shippensburg, exhibited an Angora-Nubian crossbred that was named reserve champion market got. Matthew is the son of Robert and Patty Creek of Cumberland County.

Other breed champions vying for the state title included the following:

- GCH Exemplr HSO Florence, an Alpine owned by Todd Biddle, Palymyra, Lebanon County.
- Highclass Lady 4 B, a Nubian owned by Jamie Ripka of Pennsylvania Furnace, Centre County.
- Rockspring Lav Trisha Teresa, a Toggenburg also owned by Ann Weikel.
- GCH Albanhaus Lilac, owned by Todd Biddle, took the championship in all other breeds.
- CH Rockspring Con Llove Lovespice, took the recorded grade competition and was shown by Joel Weikel, spouse of Ann Weikel.

Agriculture's Future Outlined

GREAT BEND, Kan. (AP) — Widespread social and lifestyle changes, coupled with unprecedented household wealth, will allow 21st Century farmers to use emerging technologies to deliver safer, healthier foods to consumers at premium prices, a futurist said.

Lowell Cattlett, a professor at the New Mexico State University, outlined his vision for the future recently at the Agriculture Vision 2000 conference.

Changes in the past century have created a spoiled society with the money to demand agricultural products that integrate the latest medicinal benefits and are produced on environmentally safe farms, he said.

"It means we are not just feeding hungry mouths. It means we can take agriculture to the next step," Cattlett said.

Technologies are now being developed that will intertwine medicine and agriculture to produce food's that can vaccinate the world against diseases such as small pox.

The future of Kansas wheat production, for example, may lie in growing genetically modified wheat to produce bread for people who are glucose intolerant, he said.

"It is a world totally inseparable from medicine, totally inseparable from the environment," Cattlett said.

As 1900 dawned across America, the average person lived to the age of 46. But by the end of 1999, the average person lived to age 76½ .

"We have four generations of people alive and healthy — with lots of money," he said.

That money — $36 trillion in household wealth in this country — will play an increasingly bigger role in the coming years, he said, because $26 trillion of it is held by an aging generation that will soon pass it on to the free spending, baby-boom generation.

"When we get the $26 trillion, we are going to spend it," Cattlett said.

In agriculture alone, $7 trillion in farm real estate is going to change hands as aging farmers retire in the next few years, he said.

"It's a phenomenal change — get ready for it," he said.

The two-day Vision 2000 conference was sponsored by Kansas State University, Water Protection Association of Central Kansas and the consulting firm of Kennedy and Coe, LLC.

The conference explored some of the emerging technologies and issues shaping agriculture in 2000 and beyond. Among them is growing use of precision agriculture to do such things as help farmers calculate — using ground positioning systems from orbiting satellites — the exact amount of fertilizer to put on a field.

For some, the vision of the future includes returning to some of the practices of the past.

Pete Ferrell, a Butler County rancher, has put together the Tall Grass Prairie Producers Cooperative to help him and his neighbors raise beef cattle in the Flint Hills in the same manner that buffalo once roamed the plains — without intervention from the rancher.

"For all our technology and hoopla, we haven't improved over nature," Ferrell said.

His vision for the future includes cooperatives where ranchers have pooled their land to allow cattle to range unfenced prairies.

Schuylkill Farm Claims Christmas Tree Honors

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – The scent of pine fills the air as visitors enter the Main Lobby of the Farm Show Complex at the 84th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

It's Christmas trees; and an award winner Fraser Fir grown by Paul Shealer of Evergreen Acres, Auburn, Schuylkill County, has been selected as the grand champion Christmas tree of the show. McClellan's Tree Farm, Middleburg, Snyder County, grew the reserve champion concolor fir.

On Friday, Jan. 7, judges selected the first place winners in the competition's 11 different categories. Then on Saturday and Sunday, visitors to the Farm Show could place a ballot vote on which of the 11 first place trees they felt deserved the grand and reserve grand champion honors.

The following were also award winners:

- Douglas Fir: McClellan's Tree Farm, Middleburg, Snyder County.
- Colorado Blue Spruce: Robert A. Good of Good's Christmas Tree Farm, Etters, York County.
- Scotch Pine: Perry Valley Tree Farm, Millerstown, Perry County.
- White Pine: Gary R. Hague of Hague's Christmas Trees, Hatfield, Fayette County.
- Engleman, Serbian and other Spruce: Paul Shealer of Evergreen Acres, Auburn, Schuylkill County.
- Norway Spruce: Robert A. Good of Good's Christmas Tree Farm, Etters, York County.
- White Spruce: Keller's Tree Farm, Hallstead, Susquehanna County.
- Balsam and Canaan Fir: Quaker State Plantations, Bloomsburg, Columbia County.
- Austrian Pine: Heritage Acres, Bloomsburg, Columbia County.

Christmas tree judges look for seven qualities in the trees. The foliage should be fresh, clean and uniform. It should be tapered from 40 percent to 90 percent, and have uniform medium density. At the base of the tree, a handle must be trimmed to five to eight inches long.

Trees must have a uniform normal color, have a natural outside appearance, and be free from damage or defects.

There were 52 entries this year, down significantly from the 84 entries in last year's Farm Show. The average age of the Christmas tree in the competition is seven to 12 years.

Glenn Beers from Monroe County, a volunteer at the exhibit, explained that the weather this past year was not desirable for tree production. "The drought had the most effect on the newly planted seedlings," Beers said. "In some areas of the state there was a loss of 90 percent. Southeastern Pennsylvania was dryer than the northern area of the state."

Pennsylvania ranks fifth nationally in the production of evergreens.

The Christmas tree judging is held in conjunction with the 84th Pennsylvania State Farm Show, the largest indoor agricultural exhibition in the nation.

NYS Vegetable Conference Feb. 8-10

ITHACA, N.Y. – The 12th Annual New York State Vegetable Conference will be conducted Feb. 8-10, at the Holiday Inn Syracuse & Convention Center on Electronics Parkway, Liverpool, N.Y.

The major statewide event draws more than 500 per day for each of the three days. Growers interested in growing new crops and engaging major new markets should not miss this first-rate opportunity to learn useful production information and marketing techniques.

As in the past, this conference - one of the very best in the Northeast for commercial vegetable growers - will feature educational sessions that focus on fresh market, storage, and processing vegetables for growers statewide, along with a full 80+ exhibitor trade show. Feb. 10th includes all-day educational sessions of the New York State Berry Growers Association.

Different crop commodities and related topics will be featured on each of the three days. Key sessions planned are Feb. 8 - potatoes, snap beans, carrots and beets, labor management, pumpkins and vine crops, and cabbage; Feb. 9 - processing sweet corn, fresh market sweet corn, onions and drip irrigation and soil management; Feb. 10 - tomatoes and peppers/salsa crops, medicinal herbs, producing quality leafy greens, and berries and small fruits.

The annual meetings for a number of processing vegetable advisory groups, the New York State Vegetable Growers Association, the Empire State Potato Growers, and the New York State Berry Growers Association also will be during the conference.

Pesticide recertification credits and certified crop adviser credits have been applied for.

Meeting Showcases One Of Country's Largest Silos

MADISON, Wis. — Silo builders, farmers, extension personnel, and media were on hand to hear the answer to a question recently: why build one of the nation's biggest silos?

At the 88th meeting of the International Silo Association in Madison, Wis., Jason VanGilder, Dovan Farms, Berlin, Pa., explained about the large silo at Dovan Farms.

The new poured concrete silo, measuring 30 feet in diameter and 132 feet tall, has a capacity of 3,000 tons or more of corn silage. Constructed in 1998, the silo is equipped with an elevated floor so the feed truck can drive through and be quickly loaded.

Dovan Farms is able to load more than a ton per minute with no one needed to pack the silage. Farm personnel can typically unload a ton a minute.

The VanGilders are able to save thousands of dollars in labor and machinery costs each year with the new system. With increased feed quality and less than five percent loss, the tower silo could be an ideal system for the farms' expanding herd. Another silo, perhaps taller, is being planned for future expansion.

The large silo costs more than any horizontal system. But they will be able to pay the difference in three years and enjoy convenience, improved feed quality, and savings.

After visiting Dovan's open house last winter, farmers from Virginia asked Sollenberger Silos Corp. to construct a similar silo for their operation. The farmers have plans for another large silo in the future.

Monsanto Reduces Risk For Growers

ST. LOUIS, MO. – More than 32,000 Midwestern growers who faced unexpected weed flushes or crop loss or had to replant due to severe weather in 1999 found that Monsanto's innovative Roundup Technology Value Package™ (TVP) Rewards Program reduced their financial risk.

Growers who make qualifying purchases of Roundup Ready® soybeans or corn, YieldGard® insect-protected corn or YieldGard and Roundup Ready corn stacked genetics and use Roundup brand herbicide on their technology acres, are eligible to participate in the TVP, which is a risk sharing program for growers who use Monsanto technology. The TVP refunds the technology costs of Roundup Ready and YieldGard products if the crop is destroyed and can not be replanted. If there is time to replant, the company waives the technology costs/seed premium if the field is replanted with the same Monsanto technology.

To be eligible for TVP, labeled Roundup brands, FieldMaster or new Ready Master ATZ must be used for burndown and/or in-crop applications with any Monsanto technology crop.

"This was a tough year for Midwestern farmers, with too much rain in some areas and too little in other areas," said Bart Baudler, Monsanto marketing manager for the North Central region. "Growers who were enrolled in the TVP could take some comfort in knowing that their investment in biotechnology products was not lost due to unexpected weather conditions.

"Growers receive tremendous benefits when they buy Roundup brand herbicides along with Roundup Ready and YieldGard seed technology," said Baudler. "But, if weather destroys the crop, growers don't get to realize these benefits. That's why we refund the premium that qualifying growers paid for the technology."

The 2000 TVP offers growers a refund of $6.50 per bag for Roundup Ready soybeans, $18 per bag for Roundup Ready corn, $24 per bag for YieldGard corn, and $42 per bag for YieldGard and Roundup Ready corn stacked genetics if a grower's seed or crop is destroyed.

Southeast Ohio Farmer Wins Vermeer's 100,000th Baler

PELLA, Iowa – Roy Van Meter, a longtime native of Racine, Ohio, (located in the Hill Country of southeast Ohio), is the lucky winner of a brand new Vermeer baler following a recent sweepstakes drawing at Vermeer.

The grand prize was given away by the Pella, Iowa hay equipment manufacturer to commemorate Vermeer's 50th year in business and to mark production of its 100,000th baler.

Van Meter, a local Polled Hereford purebred producer, decided to enter the contest late last winter after having read a farm magazine article about how Gary Vermeer had invented the Big Round Baler back in 1971. Within the article were instructions on how to write for the entry form from Vermeer. He wrote in, and the rest was history.

"I got this call in late April from Mark Core (marketing director at Vermeer), telling me that I had won the Vermeer Baler, and when you get a call like that, of course, you have a tendency not to believe what you just heard, said Van Meter.

Roy Van Meter was the lucky winner of a brand new baler from Vermeer following a recent contest.

"So, I called him back three days later, just to confirm it. I asked Mark, 'if that baler that I won was for real?' And, without even skipping a beat, he says to me 'what baler?' Then he started laughing and told me, 'sure enough, it was true.' What a great way to start the new hay season," he said.

Van Meter, with his wife Bonnie, farm the same land he was born on 58 years ago. The retired Ohio Department of Transportation employee also has three grown children not involved in the operation.

Van Meter's winning entry form was picked by Gary Vermeer, the person who invented the big round baler back in 1971 after he was visiting with a neighbor/friend who decided to get out of the cow-calf because of the hassels of putting up hay. The winning entry was one of approximately 40,000 sweepstake entries submitted by individuals who either wrote in, signed up at various farm shows, or visited Vermeer hay specialist distributorships throughout the U.S. during the seven-month-long contest.

Kim Jividen-Deckard of Jividen's Farm Equipment (A Vermeer ag retail distributor in Gallipolis, Ohio, approximately 35 miles from the winner) delivered the baler on June 11.

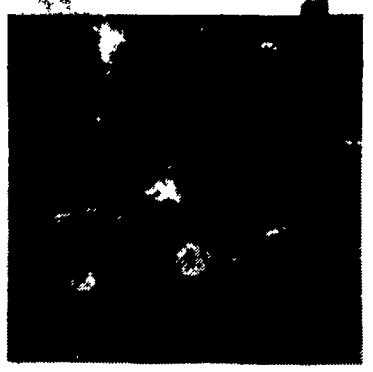
Deere Rotary Cutters Increase Productivity, Safety

MOLINE, Ill. – John Deere has introduced the MX and HX Rotary Cutters, six new models that combine features from previous models with new technology for increased productivity and safety. The cutters are compatible with the 4000 and the 5000 Series John Deere tractors. The six new cutter models share several key features.



John Deere introduced the MX and HX Rotary Cutters, six new models that combine features from previous models with new technology for increased productivity and safety.

The cutters are built with exclusive "Double Decker" design. Two welded decks, each up to 3.5 mm (0.138-inch) thick, form the upper and lower surface of the rotary cutter frame. This design, along with internal stiffeners sandwiched for extra rigidity between the decks, provides strength and better cutting performance.

The top deck is domed, so water and crop debris can roll off the deck, reducing water buildup and deck rust. Each cutter features a "Max Flow" cutting chamber, which allows for maximum air flow between the two decks, further improving material distribution. John Deere added gearcases for reliability and dependability, and stumpjumpers for protection against stumps, rocks and other obstacles.

The HX10 Rotary Cutter features a cutting width of 10.5 feet. It incorporates heavy-duty features and is versatile enough to appeal to customers who do everything from pasture clipping and 2-inch diameter brush to high volume crop shredding. This rotary cutter is well suited to high horsepower, high usage hour applications.

MX Series Rotary Cutters designate mid-duty features in 8-foot size and in a 10.5 foot size. They are good for grass and weed maintenance as well as 2-inch diameter brush. These rotary cutters are suited for tractors under 100 PTO hp.

MX5, MX6, and MX7 Single Spindle Rotary Cutters feature 1/4-inch side skirts, stumpjumpers, and 90 gearcase horsepower rating. They replace the 516, 616 and 717 John Deere models.

Farm Show's Over But Memories Live On

Jack Mickey, left, and his son Dwight took 47 first places for apple competition at the Farm Show. At right is Don Smith, chairperson for the fruit and edible nut display. The Mickeys said drip irrigation really paid off during the drought-stricken summer. The Mickeys drip-irrigated 40 acres on their Chambersburg orchard. "It made the difference between having and not having a crop," Dwight said.

Junia Isiminger, assistant director for Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Service, is a "real cheesehead," according to visitors at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Kathy Ayers of the Pennsylvania Veal Producers Association serves veal meatballs to visitors.

Farm Show visitors stop by the Lancaster Farming booth to renew or sign up for subscriptions and register for the ice cream freezer.

Quadrant Produces Large Bales Quickly, Efficiently

COLUMBUS, Ind. — The Claas Quadrant 2200 Square Baler produces large, densely packed bales of straw, hay, or silage quickly and efficiently.

The Quadrant 2200 produces dense bales 27 inches high x 48 inches wide and up to 10 feet long. The baler has a hydraulically-operated pick-up that is 83 inches wide as well as a 10-foot baling channel.

The Quadrant 2200 also features the Roto Feed enhanced crop intake which insures even crop flow and high intake volumes. The result is compact, rock hard bales, in silage, straw, or hay, and efficient utilization of space on truck trailers.

The Quadrant 2200 RC features the unique Class Roto Cut Cutting System which preprocesses crops for feeding or bedding. The system includes a heavy-duty helical rotor which feeds the material evenly through stationary knives. Each knife is spring-loaded to protect against foreign material.

The operator can choose to use 0, 6, 13 or 25 knives and can engage and disengage the knives via a switch on the cab-mounted control box. By flipping another switch in the cab, operators can fold down the chopping housing to either change knives or clear blockages easily.

The Quadrant 2200 utilizes the advanced Claas Control Terminal (CCT) to control and monitor the machine. Easy to operate, the computerized control system allows the operator to adjust bale length from the driver's seat while providing information on baling pressure, knife position, and tying. The operator may also adjust knife engagement and baling pressure with the push of a button. The CCT is also available with a Claas moisture sensor.

Other features on the Quadrant 2200 include six high-performance knotters driven by universal drive shaft and gears, adjustable bale length and density, swinging drawbar hitch, wide angle universal drive shaft and retractable hydraulic support jack. Optional features include bale shape indicator, central lubrication, extended drawbar, and spring-retained cover plate.

Thanks to axle improvements, engine placement and a sleek hood design, the MX Series Magnum can easily turn into 12 30-inch rows with all row crop tire configurations on true 60-inch tread settings

The new, single-piece, sculpted, cast iron Surround frame is the key to the enhanced capabilities and performance of these tractors It enables the MX Series Magnum to offer the first factory front duals, dramatically improving both traction and flotation. By balancing the chassis, we've significantly reduced the amount of front ballast required. And the frame easily accomodates mounted chemical tanks or loaders, allowing you to perform multiple applications.

What's against soft paint?

In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy. Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc can easily scratch softer paint. Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely. Everlast heat forms to prevent this. Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.

Bed your free stalls fast... 60 stalls in 60 seconds

"It's amazing how fast it is."
Dale Kennedy, Catalpa Farm, Middletown, PA

"The Millcreek Bedding Spreader saves me untold hours of back breaking manual labor installing fresh sawdust in my 125 stalls. Now I use less material and get a more controlled application. The Bedding Spreader is a good equipment value because I use it so often."

Now you can apply fresh wood shavings, sawdust or sand for free stall bedding 75% faster - with just one man. No more shovel, no more backache.

The Millcreek Bedding Spreader puts fresh bedding exactly where you want it. There's nothing like it for fast, efficient and cost-effective application of fresh bedding material in free stall barns.

For example, Scott Coblentz, Deer Spring Farm, Maryland, milks 280 head and uses sand to help improve herd health. It used to take 2 men almost 2 days to install fresh bedding. Now, with the Millcreek Bedding Spreader, one man does the job in hours.

Call today for free information.

Demonstration Site Examines High

Gregory K. Burns and
Daniel P. Burns
Penn State

At the North Central ICM demonstration site in Elk County, two high tunnel greenhouses are being evaluated for use in early season production of tomatoes, melons, and peppers. On May 1 the tomato and pepper house was planted. This date is one month previous to the normal late frost date for the area. Started five weeks earlier, three varieties were planted with one variety per row. The spacing was three feet between rows and two feet between each plant. Peppers were planted the same day and were spaced one foot apart. One week later the melon house was planted with two feet between plants and six feet between rows. After the transplants were set out the high tunnel sides were rolled up every day around 7 a.m.-7:30 a.m. to prevent the buildup of excessive heat and humidity as well as reduce the potential for fungal infection.

In midsummer the houses were closed at approximately 5:30 p.m. and during the spring and fall around 4:30-5 p.m. On cool nights the house would retain an additional 10 degrees above the outside air with no additional heat being supplied. This gave an excellent boost to the plants making them grow and ripen much sooner than they would have on the outside. Daytime temperatures in the houses were only slightly greater than temperatures outside because the sides were rolled up allowing heat to circulate out of the house.

Immediately after planting a 6-foot stake was driven into the ground beside each transplant Several weeks later the plants were pruned to the stakes. All of the suckers except the one growing immediately below the first flower cluster were removed. This sucker and the main stem of the plant were then tied to the stake. Each week until the plants reached to the height of the top of the stakes, all suckers were removed from both main shoots and tied up. Upon reaching that highest point, the tops were removed. An alternative way to prune and stake plants would be to use the basketweave system. Irrigation water was applied at the rate of 1/2 hour every three days early in the season. Later as fruit size swelled and neared maturity the house was watered for an hour every three days.

Tomato Variety Comparison

The three tomato varieties compared were Big Beef, Ultra Sweet, and Bush Early Girl. The first variety, Bush Early Girl, is a large early tomato, a determinate type and grows only 56 days until harvest. Planted on May 1, the initial harvest was made July 17. This date is approximately one month earlier than typical first harvest in our area. As these tomatoes were being grown for a farmer's market, this would give a sizable advantage for the early market. For the first two weeks, the tomatoes sold for $1.60 per pound. Bush Early Girl has excellent quality and exceptional size for a tomato this early. Unlike Ultra Sweet and Big Beef, there was virtually no blossom end rot or catfacing. Bush Early Girl's yield totaled 227.5 pounds with an average of 15.16 pounds per plant. The Early Girl tomatoes were the most valuable because they came in before the price dropped significantly Sales from Early Girl totaled $242.95 with a seasonal average price of $1.06 per pound.

The second variety was Ultra Sweet. First picking was made on July 25 and it takes 62 days until harvest. An indeterminate variety, it showed a considerable amount of blossom end rot early and the size of the tomatoes was small compared to the other types. This variety is well liked in New Hampshire for its cold tolerance but other cultivars appear to be superior under Pennsylvania conditions. Ultra Sweet yielded 239 pounds of tomatoes with an average yield of 15.93 pounds per plant. They sold for an average of $1 per pound and the total sales from Ultra Sweet were $240.45.

The third variety tested was Big Beef. Big Beef is also an indeterminate variety and takes 72 days until harvest, but was first picked on July 26, only one day after Ultra Sweet. Big Beef is an extremely large, high quality tomato. The greatest problem found was excessive catfacing early in the season which degraded the quality. Big Beef was the highest yielding variety but the majority of the harvest came later in the season so that their price per pound was lower than the other two. The total yield was 312 pounds with an average of 20.8 pounds per plant. Sales from Big Beef totaled $283 with an average of 90 cents per pound.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| Early Girl | 227 5 | 15.16 LB/plt | $242 95 | $1 06/LB |
| Ultra Sweet | 239 | 15 93 LB/plt | $240 45 | $1.00/LB |
| Big Beef | 312 | 20.8 LB/plt. | $283 00 | $ .90/LB |
| Total | 778 5 | 17.3 LB/plt. | $766.40 | $ .98/LB |

| Variety | Days Until Harvest | Seeded | Transplanted | First Harvest |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Early Girl | 56 | 3/26 | 5/1 | 7/17 |
| Ultra Sweet | 62 | 3/26 | 5/1 | 7/25 |
| Big Beef | 72 | 3/26 | 5/1 | 7/26 |

These tomatoes were grown to sell at a farmer's market and the goal was to find which varieties would receive the best price throughout the year. Several possible conclusions can be made regarding which tomatoes would best answer this need. Growing only Bush Early Girl would result in a large number of tomatoes early in the season, which might exceed market demand, and later the number would diminish. Planting only Big Beef would bypass the early part of the season, which is partly what high tunnels are for! The first scenario would be to plant half of the house in Big Beef and the other half in Bush Early Girl. This arrangement would give a steady flow of tomatoes throughout the marketing season. Another option would be to plant two rows of Bush Early Girl and one row of Big Beef, so that a better price could be attained early on and have less tomatoes later when the price drops. A third option would be to plant part Early Girl and an additional type such as Goliath that is not noted for catfacing problems. A comparison planting of one row Bush Early Girl, one row Big Beef and one row Goliath should be conducted.

Several other varieties that performed well for Tim and Janet Taylor from Crossroad Farm in Vermont were Match and Trust. They also found Big Beef and Ultra Sweet to produce well for them. They liked Ultra Sweet for its flavor, shape, and size. This possibly could be due to their 90-day growing season and cold zone 4 climate where Ultra Sweet seems to produce better than other varieties.

Report On Other Crops

The other trials conducted in the high tunnel were largely successful as well. Cantaloupe and watermelon were planted in the other house on May 9. The objective for the cantaloupe was to harvest them as early as possible in order to again capture the early market. The variety of cantaloupe tested was Earligold, a variety with 68 days until harvest. The first harvest was made on July 8 but the numbers did not increase until a week later. In spite of their relatively small size, they sold for $2.50 each because of their earliness. One deficiency observed was that they did not have the taste that later melons develop.

Two different varieties of watermelons were tried: Golden Crown and Million Bucks. Golden Crown is a small round melon, yellow on the outside and red on the inside. They have excellent taste and are very early with only 60 days until harvest. These melons also sold for $2.50 each and are very popular at the farmer's market. They were first harvested on July 9. The other variety of watermelon, Million Bucks, is a large traditional melon. They possess good size and flavor. Million Bucks was first harvested on July 30 and they take 78 days until harvest. They sold for 30 cents per pound. The problem with both watermelon varieties was low yield. This possibly could be due to a lack of effective pollination; however, the cantaloupe in the same house yielded very well.

Another experiment was to plant three plants of a patio tomato to observe how they would yield. The variety was called Fourth of July and had 44 days until harvest. The first harvest of Fourth of July was on July 19, two days after the first harvest of Bush Early Girl, so they were extremely late. Their yields were excellent.

Gurney's Giant, the variety of pepper grown, is a large thick-fleshed pepper. They did very well in the high tunnel and produced large, excellent quality peppers. They have 70 days until harvest with the first harvest on July 5. One problem with growing peppers in the high tunnel is that the plants grew so large that they had to be staked so that they did not fall over.

| Variety | Seeded | Planted | Days Until Harvest | First Harvest |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Million Bucks | 3/27 | 5/9 | 78 | 7/30 |
| Golden Crown | 3/27 | 5/9 | 60 | 7/9 |
| Earligold | 3/27 | 5/9 | 68 | 7/8 |
| 4th of July | 3/27 | 5/1 | 44 | 7/19 |
| Gurney's Giant | 3/25 | 5/9 | 70 | 7/5 |

The final analysis of this year's trials indicate that some changes should be implemented for the small scale grower. The melon house should be planted completely in high value muskmelons because watermelon do not seem to produce the level of yields required to make them worth the space implemented for the small scale grower. The melon house should be planted completely in high value muskmelons because watermelon do not seem to produce the level of yields required to make them worth the space. That space could be better utilized to grow something else more profitable. Additionally, there is excessive room for making mistakes when harvesting watermelon.

In the high tunnel there was no way of knowing just how much the additional night heat sped up the watermelon's maturing process with the result that the days until harvest did not indicate clearly as to when to expect ripening. As you can see by the chart comparing the days until harvest, the peppers taking 70 days were harvested 14 days early. This was typical for many of the crops in these trials.

It is difficult to determine how different species of plants are going to react to high tunnel growing conditions. Watermelons are especially hard because they do not offer a reliable way to discern harvestability. This year many mistakes were made wasting melons by taking them underripe.

Conclusion

High tunnels are an excellent way to get the edge of the early or late markets for vegetables. They can be very profitable and therefore a good supplement to a small farm's income. Another way to use a tunnel is to take advantage of the early start and grow several consecutive crops of vegetables in the same season.

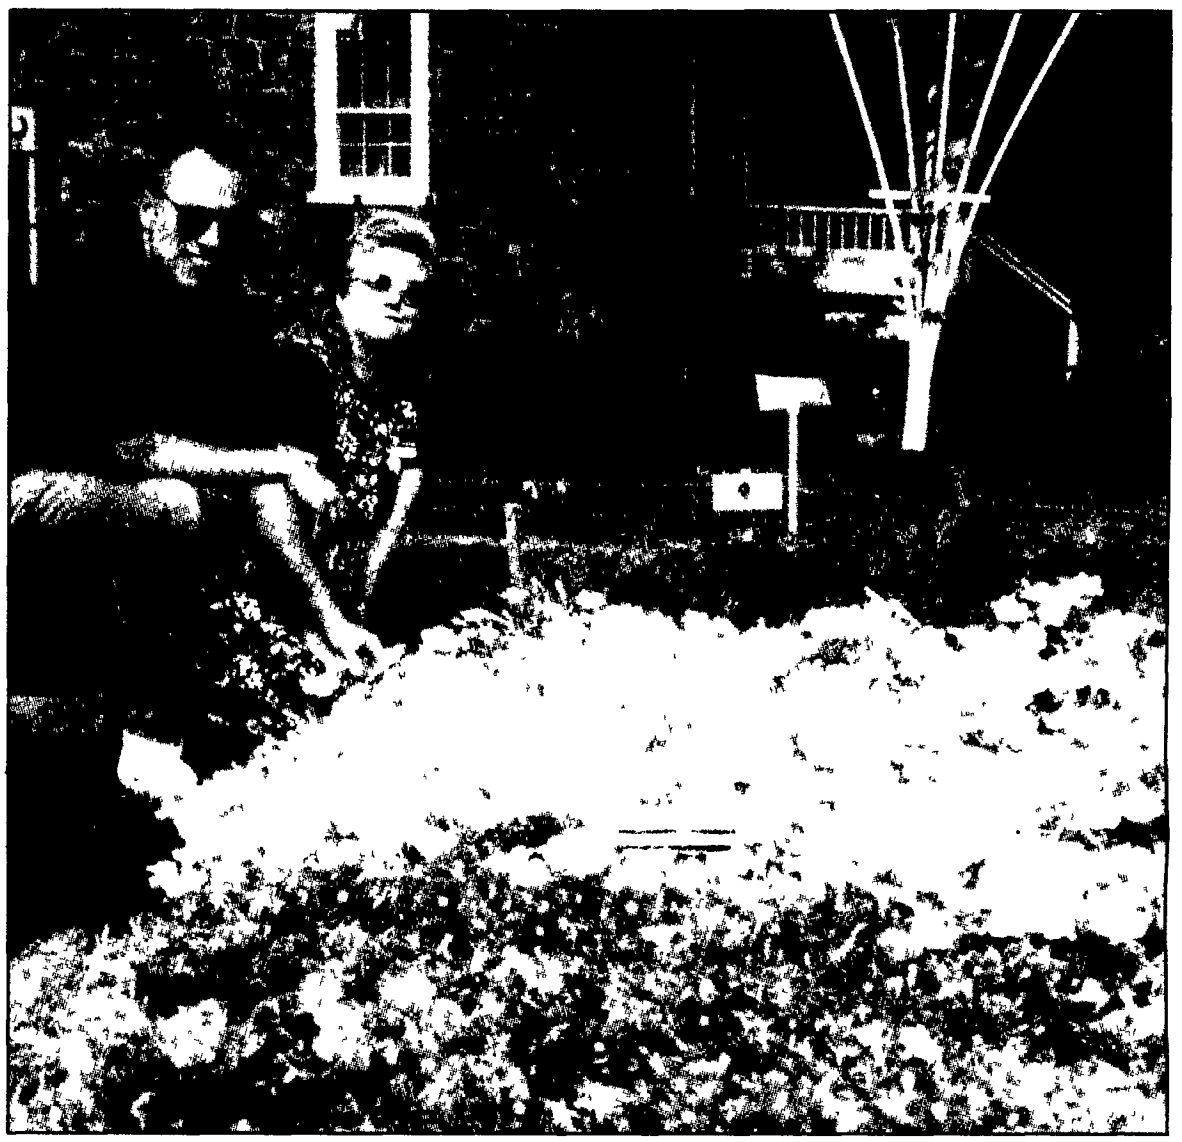
Gardener Selects Program Gives New Meaning To 'Colorful' Gardening



Kathy Engle-Debes of West York, a Master Gardener since 1991, and one of two evaluators of the extension plants grown in the Trial Garden, and Tom Becker, Agent/horticulture in York County. The two look over the Pink, Misty Lilac, and Purple Wave petunias that were hit by the drought, but after rain returned to radiant bloom. Engle-Debes & Becker were pleased with the Petunias' performance.

YORK (York Co.)–If you live in York County and are looking for a flower that will put a bloom in your garden, try the "new look" variety of a Celosia Argentata, or Coreopsis Rosea "American Dream."

Then there is the Petunia X hybrida "Misty Lilac Wave," chosen the very best in York County in the Pennsylvania Gardener Selects Plants of the Year program. The project was undertaken this summer by the York County Master Gardeners and the Penn State Extension Office in trial gardens at John Rudy County Park.

At 28 other sites throughout the commonwealth, gardeners planted "new" plant varieties in an effort to determine which would perform best in that particular locale.

Tom Becker, York County extension agent/horticulture, said that York County has a thriving green industry. These businesses provide bedding plants, flowering annuals, perennials, and woody landscape plants to

Planned, Installed Correctly, High Tunnels Benefit Growers

ANDY ANDREWS

RIDGWAY (Elk Co.) — A couple of years of using high tunnels have proven fruitful, literally, for Elk County grower Greg Burns, multicounty extension agent.

Serving as consultant for his two sons, who run the high tunnel operation, Burns installed the houses about two years ago. One larger house contains cantaloupes and the other houses tomatoes.

The houses are similar to ones that Burns inspected last August at the Penn State Ag Progress Days in Rockspring. At the Penn State research site, houses measures 17 feet wide by 36 feet long and eight feet high.

At the Ridgeway location, one house measures 32 feet long and the other about 40 feet long, and only 12 feet wide. The houses, like those at Rockspring, use a four-year clear 6- mil plastic. Burns uses black plastic mulch inside.

Burns obtained construction information and material from a company in Moultonboro, New Hampshire. The houses, available in kits, cost $900 and $700, Burns said. Each took about a day to assemble.

The beauty of using high tunnels is that, inexpensively, crops can be planted earlier and rushed to market ahead of crops planted conventionally. The key is to ensure proper drip irrigation and to roll up the sides regularly. And, if necessary, ensure a heating system, such as a portable propane furnace, is installed to protect from freezing temperatures.

The past growing season Burns grew watermelons, muskmelons, and tomatoes. Because of the difficulty in harvesting the watermelons,

Planting For The New Millennium Is Theme

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.)–Fruit and vegetable growers from all over the Middle Atlantic states will be "Planting for the New Millennium" at the 2000 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention here Jan. 25-27.

More than 1,800 persons, mostly fruit and vegetable growers from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey and other states, are expected to gather at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center for the convention.

The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticulture Society. The convention also attracts many growers from outside the tri-state area as well.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with more than 130 exhibitors. Five and sometimes six concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention.

On the first day of the convention, sessions on tree fruit (including discussions of fire blight, varieties, and ethephon), sweet corn, basics of vegetable production, greenhouse vegetables, potatoes, season extension technology, mulches, labor/regulatory issues, cole crops, and sustainable growing will be offered. Sessions on the second day will focus on stone fruit (including discussions of pesticide efficiency and the plum pox virus affecting stone fruit), direct marketing, strawberry plasticulture, processing crops, peppers, bedding plants, perennials, irrigation, alternative tillage, and fumigation. The last day will feature tree fruit (including discussions of new mating disrupters and new strategies with limited organic phosphates and IPM programs), tomatoes, vine crops, small fruit, cut flowers, and value-added vegetables sessions.

A special computer use workshop will be conducted throughout the first two days of the convention. Growers will be able to see demonstrations of agricultural software programs and the use of the Internet.

On Jan. 26, two receptions for growers will be held. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 1999 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon on the closing day, Jan. 27.

On the first evening, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception hosted primarily by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Food Merchants Association. The annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Banquet will follow with recognitions and entertainment.

FOOD SAFETY STARTS ON YOUR FARM

There has been an increase in the amount of fresh fruits and vegetables consumed by people in the U.S. since 1970. The average person ate 564 pounds of fresh produce in 1970 and, by 1996, the average person was eating 696 pounds, an increase of 23 percent.

While this is good news for folks such as you who are growing fresh produce, there has also been another recent trend that is not good news.

The number of outbreaks of foodborne illness related to produce has more than doubled from 1987 to 1998. The number of people affected by these outbreaks has also more than doubled.

Contrary to what many people believe, the cause of these outbreaks is not mostly from contaminated fruits and vegetables imported into this country. More than 75 percent of these foodborne illness outbreaks were actually traced to produce grown here in the U.S.

There was a wide variety of fruits and vegetables involved, including raspberries, strawberries, tomatoes, lettuce, cabbage, carrots, and sprouts. Two bacteria — Salmonella and E.coli — caused most of the outbreaks.

Outbreaks of foodborne illness can result in major financial losses to producers of the crop causing with any outbreak as well as associated business interests. The outbreak of illness in 1996 first thought to be caused by strawberries from California resulted in an estimated $50 million loss to the strawberry industry of that state. The outbreak was later traced to imported raspberries, but it was too late for the strawberry growers.

A recent outbreak of illness caused by contaminated apple juice cost investors in the company an estimated $12.4 million when stock values dropped. And lawsuits and attorney and court fees will surely cost the company additional money.

What would a case of foodborne illness traced to a Lancaster County farm cost the farmer? What would it cost our fresh produce industry?

One of my major concerns for our produce industry has to do with the nature of agriculture in the county. Dairy, beef, hog and poultry producers are found throughout Lancaster County. Unfortunately, many of the organisms that cause foodborne illness are associated with animals and animal manure. This is not to say that animals are the only source of harmful organisms — foodborne illness can also be caused by poor worker hygiene — but growers with animal operations need to be especially careful.

Following are some ways to reduce the chances of produce contamination on the farm that I gathered at a recent workshop. Fortunately, many of these practices will not cause you to have to spend additional money in your operation and some of them can improve crop yields and quality.

• First — manage your manure carefully, since it can be a primary source of harmful organisms. Ideally, only use manure on fields that will produce agronomic crops, not vegetable crops, the year of application. Apply manure to vegetable fields after the final harvest is complete and incorporate as soon as possible. Never sidedress fruits and vegetables with manure. Keep manure storage areas and produce fields as far apart as you can. Whenever possible, actively compost manure (hot piles) before application to the field. Prevent any runoff from your barnyard and manure storage areas from entering produce fields. A rule of thumb is that you should not harvest vegetables or fruit crops from a field treated with manure for at least 120 days after application. If you must grow vegetables in a field where manure was applied, avoid growing root crops and leafy vegetables.

• Second — start with clean water. Avoid overhead irrigation whenever possible, especially if your water source is a stream or pond. The use of trickle irrigation will both conserve water and reduce the chances of contamination since the edible portions of the crop are not wetted. If you must use overhead irrigation, then use water that is safe to drink. Well water is generally safe (if the wellhead is protected from manure runoff and the casing is intact) and you can have it tested to be sure. Streams and ponds are easily contaminated by runoff that could contain harmful organisms. Consider a drip irrigation system if you are using surface water. You may also want to consider periodic testing of your surface water source.

• Third — reduce the chances of contamination of produce by using good cultural practices. Start by using drinkable water for spraying to reduce your chances of applying harmful organisms along with your chemicals. Grow crops on plastic mulch to reduce the chances of rains splashing harmful organisms onto the crop. This is in addition to the many other benefits of plastic mulch (weed control, water conservation, etc.). Grow crops above the soil where possible. For example, stake tomatoes instead of letting them lay on the soil. Consider growing your crops in a no-till field. The mulch cover on the soil will again reduce the chances of harmful organisms splashing onto your crop (in addition to the other benefits of no-till). You could also consider using mulch between the rows to accomplish the same thing. Try to minimize animal traffic in and near produce fields. This includes both domestic and wild animals. You should not graze livestock or allow poultry into fields during the year of harvest.

• Fourth — have field workers practice good hygiene. Hands should be washed carefully and thoroughly with soap and water before handling the crop. Clothing and shoes should be changed after working in any animal operation before entering a produce field. Obviously ill employees should not be handling produce at any time.

New Meaning To 'Colorful' Gardening

George Weaver of Etters in York County, a Master Gardener since 1995, waters container gardens at the Trial Garden at John Rudy Park. The gardens are a project sponsored by York County's Penn State Extension Office and cared for by Master Gardeners from the area.

landscapers and gardeners.

"In Pennsylvania, retail sales of nursery plants exceeds $200 million. York County has 334 registered nursery, greenhouse, landscape and garden center businesses representing 5.5 percent of the 6,034 green industry businesses located in Pennsylvania. Extension programs are currently reaching 23 percent of these businesses in York County," Becker said.

He said, "In it's first year, 70 'best' plant performers were evaluated in the York trial, including 27 annual and perennial flowers in the Gardener Selects trial. Thirty Master Gardeners donated 400 hours to plant, maintain, and evaluate plants in the trial.

"As a result, the program increased York countian's exposure to the identity, culture, and use of desirable 'new' plant varieties used throughout the green industry."

While the "Misty Lilac Wave Petunia" topped the recommended list of plants in the 1999 York County trial because of its outstanding color and habit, the Celosia Argentata with bright scarlet plumes with bronze leaves, and Coreopisis Rosea, a fast growing, spreading perennial for naturalizing–both previously mentioned–were alsc on the recommended list.

Others on the list were Petunia X hybrida "Mini

Gardener Selects Program

Brilliant Pink," which has a mass of bold flowers on trailing vines; Petunia X hybrida "Pink Wave," with large flowers, high vigor and recommended for use in beds or as groundcover; Pleectranthus Madagascariensis, fast-growing and grown for its white and green leaves; portulaca "Sundial Mix," with pastel colors, large flowers and a mass of color in July and August; Rudbecia "Indian Summer," with large golden-yellow flowers, and Salvia Farinacea "Signum," a beautiful blue salvia that is constantly blooming and attracts butterflies.

The Garden Selects program was established by Dr. Robert Berghage, the Penn State Trial Garden director, and in its first year looked at the plant performance ratings of 27 herbaceous plants in the 29 locations statewide.

The 'best' plant performers were selected from earlier field trial evaluations at the Penn State Horticulture Trial Gardens at University Park and the Southeast Research and Extension Center in Landisville.

In York County, Becker said, "We're going to be expanding next year. We'll put a groundhog fence around a vegetable area and then the probation department is going to be bringing out teen-agers who are required to do some community service and they're going to be taking care of the vegetable trials, while the Master Gardeners will continue to maintain this area (flower gardens).

"We felt that York County needs to have this trial for the purposes that people can start evaluating things on their own and you can see we've put good educational signs for each plant so that people don't have to be out here for a tour. They can come out at anytime and see the progress."

The Pennsylvania Gardener Selects plants will be promoted throughout the green industry. The industry supports the initiative, Becker said.

"It's a wonderful idea because it's going to make for more landscapes throughout York County that will look great all season long," Becker said.

Master Gardener Kathy Engle-Debes, designer of the beds at Rudy Park and one of York County's evaluators of the plants, explained that she and another Master Gardener measured and placed bamboo sticks where each plant show go, making it easier for those doing the planting. The evaluation took place throughout the summer. Master Gardener Frank Sommer was the main evaluator of the project, making constant trips to the gardens.

Engle-Debes noted that a soaker hose was installed, but in some cases plants that are drought tolerant died out because the soil was too moist.

"We also have a very big population of butterflies that moved in and there are many host plants. I found larvae on a couple of the plants, so we're starting to establish some beneficial insects," she said.

Becker said the perennial plants will remain next year, and "we will probably continue to put in native plants because we're seeing a continuing trend toward and interest in these types of plants, and they're things that people are not familiar with. Kathy has been helpful in putting in some unusual flowers that I wasn't even aware of, so that has been a real help for me."

• Finally — practice safe harvest and handling practices. Clean and sanitize harvest containers and handling areas prior to harvest. Store bins in the sun, because the ultraviolet rays can kill harmful organisms. Do not stand in bins during harvest. Keep harvested produce as cool as possible. Lower temperatures will both preserve produce quality and slow the growth of any potentially harmful organisms. Any water used for produce washing should be drinkable and changed often. Any ice used to cool harvested crops should be made from drinkable water. Keep animals away from produce handling and storage areas when possible. This includes dogs and cats! And again have workers practice good personal hygiene.

Unfortunately, there is no way you can possibly guarantee that any fruits or vegetables produced on your farm will be free of harmful organisms. However, there have been no produce-related outbreaks of foodborne illness from fruits and vegetables grown in Lancaster County. By incorporating as many of these safety suggestions as possible into your farming operation, the chances of a future outbreak should be reduced. In addition to reducing the chances of contamination of your fresh fruits and vegetables, many of these suggestions are also beneficial to crop production. To me that means a win-win situation.

Planned, Installed Correctly

and because they came to market sooner than expected, Burns has decided to return to growing only muskmelons and tomatoes this year.

For the cantaloupes, Burns grows two rows placed six feet apart. Plants are grown right to the end of the tunnels. The cantaloupes are under black plastic with irrigation lines underneath. The muskmelons were planted May 1, about a month or more earlier than conventional crops.

The tomatoes are grown on a wooden 6-foot stake and weave system, two feet apart, on three rows inside the high tunnel, Burns noted. Planted were an early variety, Bush Early Girl, a "very good, early variety, with large fruit size," he said. Also planted was Big Beef, a beefsteak tomato.

Because of high temperatures the past summer, the Big Beef tomatoes experienced "catfacing," or deformed fruit. This year Burns wants to test out another beefsteak variety, Goliath, to see if it is resistant to catfacing.

Burns pays for his seeds and conducts his own trials. He also wants to try different mulch colors.

High tunnels are an ideal way to ensure early crops. For one thing, growing degree days are increased because of the heating. The leaves stay dry, which keeps fungal problems away. The past growing seasons, "we didn't spray any fungicides, and got very little early blight on the tomatoes," he said. However, the sides of the houses needed to be rolled up because there is some leaf moisture, in the morning from normal condensation.

The varieties of tomatoes were cared for and sold by Burns' sons, Dan, 14, and Pete, 12. The cantaloupes went to St. Marys and Ridgway in Elk County and the Emporium in Camron County.

For heating when needed, Burns used a small 20-pound propane heater. But it wasn't used because of the mild nights last spring.

Tomatoes are brought to harvest about six weeks early. Growers can pay for the cost of the tunnels "the first season," Burns said.

Burns has faced a few challenges with the high tunnels. Where Penn State rolls up the sides of the tunnel on the inside, because of problems with post screws on the frame sides, Burns was faced with rolling the 6- mil plastic on the outside.

During the winter, the plastic was left on the greenhouse-like structure. It was "easy to do," he said. "We used a broom to gently knock the snow down."

Fortunately, last winter wasn't too hard on the small growing operation. But with significant snowfall, the worry is that the structure could collapse.

Burns noted during the Ag Progress Days tour that the tunnels are valuable because they can stretch the tomato production season until the second week of October.

They also tried growing some basil with the houses, which "does well," said Burns.

The extension agent was concerned that because of the nearly enclosed system, pollination would be affected. But he didn't find that to be the case. The vine plants pollinated well.

SUPERFLOW FERTILIZER SPREADERS

SUPERFLOW SEEDER
Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.

The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.
